Blast rips World Trade Center

Suspected bomb in underground garage leaves 7 dead, 600 injured

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — An explosion believed caused by a bomb in an underground garage rocked the 110-story World Trade Center Friday.

The blast killed at least seven people, injured 600 and forced thousands to flee down dark, smoke-filled stairs.

A pregnant woman was plucked off the roof of one of the two towers by a helicopter. About 200 kindergartners and elementary school children were stranded for hours on the observation deck. Other people were trapped in elevators, or in rubble in the garage and a train station beneath it.

Hundreds poured out of the towers into the streets of lower Manhattan, gasping, their faces black with soot, after groping their way from as high as the 105th floor. Others on upper floors stayed put to await help, and broke windows as the smoke reached them.

Nearly nine hours after the blast, eight disabled people were still on the 94th floor, awaiting a trip to the roof and a helicopter ride out, the Port Authority said.

The towers, the world's second-largest buildings and workplace of an estimated 100,000 people, shuddered with the nighttime explosion. Thick black smoke billowed to the top in minutes.

The blast created a 200-foot-by-100-foot crater six stories deep in the parking garage, witnesses said.

A terrorist task force of federal and city investigators believed that a car bomb caused the blast, James Fox, an assistant director of the FBI who heads its New York office, told The New York Times. He said "no bomb fragments" had been found.

After the blast, authorities received at least nine telephone calls claiming responsibility, said Jack Killorin, spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Washington.

Asked whether a bomb was used, he said, "There was nothing that we saw that would rule out a bombing." He also wouldn't rule out an accidental blast.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, in a telephone interview on the "Larry King Live" television show, said, "The information I have is that it's a bomb."

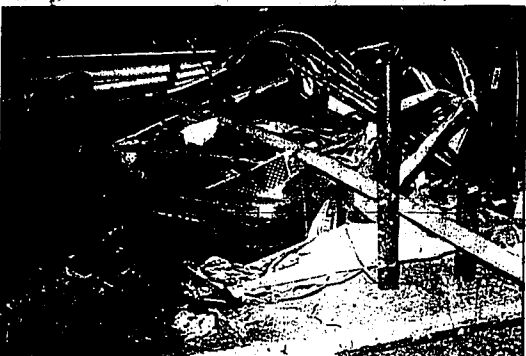

One source told The Associated Press that one group, claiming to represent Croatian militants, called 15 minutes before the blast. A second source, a police officer at the scene who like the first spoke on condition of anonymity, said a "massive bomb" was responsible.

Security was strengthened at all area airports, said Eric Hedrick of the Port Authority, which runs the trade center and the airports. Police also tightened security in Washington, D.C.

Towers part of complex

The Associated Press

Manhattan's World Trade Center comprises six buildings, including the twin 110-floor towers that are the world's second and third-tallest buildings.

The towers are 1,350 feet tall. Each has 21,800 windows, 104 elevators, and an acre of rentable space per floor.

The complex, bounded by Church, West Liberty and Vesey streets in lower Manhattan, offers 10 million square feet of office space.

That is seven times the area of the Empire State Building.

GAO launches audit of Leroy's site search

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Office of the Nuclear Waste Negotiator said it welcomes a General Accounting Office audit of its spending requested by the chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee.

But Congresswoman Larry LaRocco said Friday the investigation's findings may back up her argument that the independent federal office headed by former Idaho lieutenant governor and attorney general David Leroy should be placed under the Clinton administration's U.S. Department of Energy.

The Office of Nuclear Waste Negotiator, which last year was reauthorized to continue its work through 1995, is trying to find a volunteer to host a "Monitored Retrievable Storage" facility for high-level commercial nuclear waste. So far, $1.4 million in Energy Department grants have been distributed to 10 groups that have applied to study hosting a storage site.

A total of $3 million has been spent on the effort. The Energy Department disburses money for the program to the negotiator's office and interested groups from the industry-financed Nuclear Waste Fund.

"It's appropriate to look into how money's being spent and whether this thing's been politicized or what," said LaRocco, D-Idaho.

"Whenever you turn over the keys of government, there's a possibility a position like this would be eliminated," he said. "But I think the GAO investigation will give us a road map as to whether this function should be continued as it is or placed under the Department of Energy."

Farm interests siphon money for ag lab from school funds

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Idaho's agricultural bloc took advantage of its legislative away Friday, winning approval of more than $300,000 in higher spending that will be financed with cash that might have gone for education.

The biggest beneficiary: the Quality Assurance Laboratory on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

Members of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee had been building a cash pool to augment the education aid.

The extra general tax receipts pushed the budgets for both the Agriculture Department and the Agricultural Research and Extension Service over GOP spending targets.

Republican leaders have set the ceilings to keep the overall financial blueprint for the new fiscal year beginning July 1 within the $1.08 billion the existing tax structure will generate.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Gurnsey, R-Boise, told the best of the bulk of that money "could best be used to educate our young children in our schools."

The bulk of the additional $118,000 in the Agriculture Department budget was aimed for the new ag lab in Twin Falls — a facility the agricultural industry in 1990 promised to support with private cash if the government would just put up the $2 million to build it.

Since then, and in spite of Gurnsey's repented and pointed reminders of the original pledge, the farm bloc has managed to squeeze another $200,000 from the general treasury to get the facility up and running. It will test commodities to certify their quality.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended the industry cover the additional start-up cost in his budget scheme that has been discarded by the GOP because it was based on a $55 million tax increase.

The rest of the extra money, which Andrus did support, was earmarked for equipment purchases in the research and extension service.

But while the tax-enhanced Andrus budget was able to accommodate those additions and others and still give public education a 10 percent aid increase, the hold-the-line GOP budget contemplates a 10 percent cut in the research and extension service.

In some cases existing operations were ordered reduced. Those cutbacks helped finance an extra $600,000 for vocational education and the Idaho school for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding but a diversion for the farm bloc drew the balance off to about $2.6 million.

Financial woe may have led to shooting, police say

Kinavongsa

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Financial troubles and a heavy dose of alcohol may have stretched Bounthanh Kinavongsa to the breaking point, police said Friday.

Kinavongsa, 28, was shot and killed Monday night when he opened fire on Twin Falls police officer Ron Farnsworth with an AK-47 assault rifle.

"We will never know what may have been in the mind of Mr. Kinavongsa," Police Chief Paul Du Fresnois said.

Detectives do know that Kinavongsa has been involved for the past six months in a court battle over child support payments to the mother of his 5-year-old daughter.

Those increasing payments and the Laotian immigrant's difficulty in understanding the American legal system caused "an ongoing personal and financial crisis" for Kinavongsa, Du Fresnois said.

According to court records, Kinavongsa earned $1,194 per month before taxes. Of that, $160 a month plus health insurance costs went to the mother of his first child.

Add to that a blood alcohol level of 206 percent — roughly the equivalent of 32 beers for the 110-pound man — and the ingredients for tragedy were in place.

A friend who had dinner at Kinavongsa's home that night said he saw Kinavongsa have only two drinks.

Kinavongsa was not a heavy drinker and seemed in good spirits earlier in the evening, Thompson Thongpang said.

He left his house just a few minutes before Farnsworth heard two or more gunshots in the area of Adams and Jefferson streets, and went to investigate.

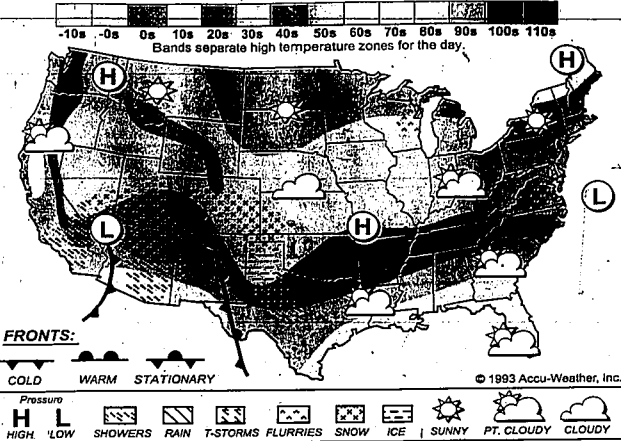

The officer saw Kinavongsa's pickup come out of an alley and followed it to Ostrander Street North, where he made a traffic stop.

Eastern seaboard, California soaked; snow moves east

The Associated Press

The remnants of a storm spread from the Ohio Valley to the East Coast on Friday, with rain in the Southeast while more snow and rain moved into the West.

At midday, snow showers extended from the Ohio Valley into the central Appalachians and from southeastern New York state into Virginia. Earlier in the day, snow also had fallen in parts of the Carolinas and northern Georgia.

Snow accumulations by midday included 2 to 5 inches in Virginia, 6 in West Virginia, 7 at higher elevations of northern Georgia and 5 in South Carolina.

Snow turned to rain over eastern Tennessee and the southern half of the Atlantic Coast, with showers and thunderstorms over southern Florida.

Another storm system moved into the Pacific Coast overnight, bringing rain and sleet at higher elevations. At midday, snow was scattered over the northern Rock-

Weather summary

Cold air, mostly clear skies and snow cover combined last night to produce record and near-record cold temperatures Friday morning.

Twin Falls set a record with a reading of 4 degrees above zero.

Southern Idaho lows ranged from 23 below at Fairfield which was the state's coldest reading, to 15 above at Homedale.

A few isolated snow flurries were reported in mountain areas and eastern Idaho. Only trace precipitation amounts were reported in the north central and central mountains.

Afternoon temperatures were generally below freezing across southern Idaho and in the 30s in the north. Skies were generally clear and winds were light.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 80 degrees at Key West and Miami, Fla. The lowest was 25 degrees below zero at Jordan and Havre, Mont.

Little help from allies for airdrop

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—NATO allies praised the planned U.S. airdrop for Bosnia but offered little direct support.

The European nations said Friday it could only supplement their current humanitarian efforts on the ground.

Many view as risky the operation to parachute food, medicine and other humanitarian aid to besieged eastern Bosnian villages.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with NATO foreign ministers but failed to persuade them to share the burden.

He told them the United States "would welcome other countries' participation," but no European nation offered any planes for the airdrop.

"You should not forget a lot of member countries very actively support the United Nations humanitarian efforts," with a considerable amount of troops on the ground," said Manfred Woerner, secretary-general of the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Britain, France and Belgium said their troops would keep escorting relief convoys by land to victims of the conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina, which has left at least 100,000 people dead or missing since it began nearly a year ago.

"We'll go ahead with the highly successful delivery of supplies by land," British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said.

Christopher said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev did not rule out possible Russian participation in the airdrop.

Two New York City police officers help an injured woman from the World Trade Center following Friday's explosion. She was among some 600 persons hurt in the blast.

Explosion

Hours after the blast, police evacuated the Empire State Building up-own because of a bomb threat. People were allowed back in during the evening.

The blast brought down the steel-and-concrete ceiling of the underground Port Authority Trans Hudson train station, a major transportation point for New Jersey commuters. A 180-foot hole was ripped in a station wall. Rescuers said no body remained trapped in that rubble, but nine hours after the blast they still were searching through the collapsed garage above the station.

The explosion damaged a fleet of Secret Service cars in the garage, including an armored limousine used by foreign dignitaries but not by the president, the agency said.

A fire burned for about two hours after the blast, creating acrid smoke. The Emergency Medical Service reported seven deaths, including four Port Authority employees, and 600 injured, with 400 of them requiring hospitalization. The injured included 31 firefighters and 3 police officers. Most of the injured suffered smoke inhalation.

"I'm just glad to be alive," said Carlisle Lee Price, who was teaching an accounting class on the 94th floor. "We felt the tremor. It was like being in an earthquake."

Robert Ashley was waiting for a train when he was bashed by debris in the station. "I don't know how I made it," Ashley said as he was carried out into the cold on a stretcher.

Alan Walker was in an elevator on the ground floor when the explosion struck, blowing out a panel that knocked him over. "It was scary as hell," he said. "There was smoke everywhere."

"It felt like a big boom," said Lisa Hoffman, who works at the nearby World Financial Center. "The building shook. I looked out the window to see if New Jersey had disappeared."

Electricity and heat was cut off to the entire Trade Center complex, leaving people trapped by thick smoke. Some people walked down from as high as the 105th floor — or spent hours stuck in elevators.

Shooting

Farnsworth told the driver twice to come out of the pickup with his hands in sight before he was fired on without warning, Du Fresno said.

The rookie officer acted in defense of his own life and within department guidelines when he returned fire, Du Fresno said.

Farnsworth, 22, was hit once in the left calf and remained in the hospital Friday. Doctors planned to examine the wound for muscle damage Friday afternoon.

If the wound is healing well enough, Farnsworth may be released from the hospital over the weekend, Capt. Bob Hodge said.

Farnsworth is in good spirits, but "he has been through the most difficult time in his life," Du Fresno said.

Hodge described Farnsworth as a model officer, who graduated with honors from the state police academy.

A native of Aberdeen, Farnsworth earned a bachelor's degree in law enforcement from Boise State University before joining the Twin Falls police department in July, Hodge said.

The officer also finished tops in his police academy class in the use of firearms.

A panel of law enforcement officials from outside the city will examine the incident, Du Fresno said.

Such review boards are routinely used after shots are fired by an officer, he said.

Twin Falls County Coroner Carl Edwards will conduct a coroner's inquest as well as Farnsworth is able to attend.

"The purpose of an inquest is to bring out all the facts," Edwards said.

The community will feel the psychological impact of the shooting for some time, Du Fresno said.

The police chief said he is concerned about the rising number of high-powered assault weapons being kept in people's homes, adding that Kinnavongsa bought his AK-47 in Twin Falls.

Although he is "not a strong proponent of gun control," Du Fresno said increasing numbers of guns designed only to kill people "may call for some restraints."

"I don't believe we expected this to happen in this city," he said.

Inside the World Trade Center: Escape from above and below

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence Brown was near the top, wearing a business suit, when the explosion shook the 110-story World Trade Center.

Fred Ferby was at the bottom, 1,300 feet away in mechanic's clothes.

Brown walked down through dark, smoky stairwells and out of the office tower. Ferby dug his way out of the rubble and gasped for air. Soon they both were gulping the same sweet oxygen.

Ferby, a 35-year-old building mechanic, was working in his shop in the basement of the 110-story building when a blast — "It sounded like it was on the other side of the wall" — threw him across the room and buried him in debris.

The next thing Ferby heard were his coworkers crying for help. He found a flashlight and, peering through the dust and darkness, pulled two of them from the wreckage of the collapsed ceiling and guided them out the door.

The rest of them crawled across the hall floor in an elevator lobby, where several other people were sitting, helplessly. Ferby kicked the door open, and they rode to the surface.

Meanwhile, 105 stories up, Brown — a 24-year-old securities trader — felt the floor shake, and the lights went out.

Within three minutes, the floor was engulfed by thick, black smoke. He measured his options and plunged into the darkness and smoke of the stairwell. As he walked down, he whistled and yelled as every landing in case anyone needed help.

Many office workers initially stayed put. Some in the smokier offices began to kick out windows, sending glass to the sidewalks below. One woman on an upper floor knocked out a window, only to have plumes of thick smoke blow into her office.

As workers in neighboring towers watched in suspense, helicopters dropped off elevator technicians atop one of the twin towers, and picked up a pregnant woman and a police officer, who was suffering from smoke inhalation.

More than 200 pupils, 120 of them kindergartners, were stranded at the center's observation deck. They were given milk and snacks before making the long walk down several hours after the blast.

Most workers who didn't wait to flee down the stairwells were calm, and some covered their faces with scarves of damp paper towels. But Brown also met three women who were crying, hysterical with fear. "A couple of men are shaking in their boots, too," Brown thought.

The stairway was dark and smoky and loud — echoing with the footsteps of a hasty, high-rise retreat.

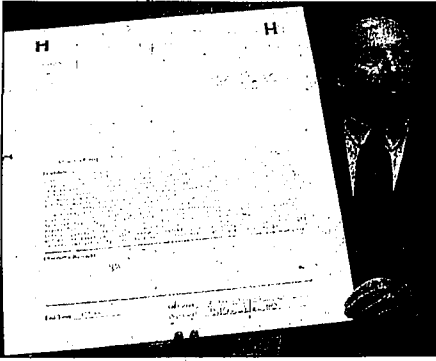

After about a half an hour — "that's how long it seemed to Brown, anyway — he reached the main floor, and safety, his legs aching, his lungs heavy with smoke, his face soot black. As he tried to answer questions, he coughed black saliva and sucked oxygen from a mask.

Others hugged each other with joy at having made it out. A businessman in an expensive suit sat on the sidewalk, sobbing in relief. A secretary knelt in prayer.

After calling his wife to let her know he was OK, Ferby said he never had a chance to worry himself.

"Something kicked in and I just kept going," he said between gulps of oxygen. "I thought I'd play later."

The Rev. Patrick Mahoney of Operation Rescue holds a copy of a document recounting the last minutes of Hugh Gale, during which he asked for the suicide procedure to be stopped.

Group says Kevorkian 'killed' Michigan man

DETROIT (AP) — The widow of a man Dr. Jack Kevorkian helped die says that her husband tried to stop the procedure, a claim based on a piece of paper that an Operation Rescue member dug out of the garbage.

Nonetheless, police say the document could lead to murder charges against the self-styled suicide doctor, who has helped 15 people kill themselves. Thirteen have breathed carbon monoxide through a mask; two used a device to give a lethal drug injection.

Operation Rescue was on the verge of an aggressive campaign — like those it stages against abortion clinics — to stop Kevorkian. But then a member dug a report out of the household trash of a Kevorkian assistant that the group says shows the death of Hugh Gale might have been murder.

"We came here to stop Jack Kevorkian. We accomplished that," the Rev. Patrick Mahoney, national spokesman for Operation Rescue, told reporters Friday.

Gale's widow maintained that her husband never abandoned his determination to die.

The document, indicating Kevorkian ignored a second plea by Gale to stop his suicide, was nothing more than a typing mistake, Cheryl Gale said.

The document, signed by Kevorkian, Mrs. Gale and two other witnesses, recounted the 70-year-old Gale's last minutes of life.

Twice, according to the report,

Gale asked Kevorkian to remove the mask from his face. The first time, Kevorkian obliged. But the second time, Gale demanded, "Take it off." Kevorkian left the mask in place until Gale's heart stopped beating, it said.

Kevorkian lawyer Geoffrey Fieger said the 64-year-old doctor didn't ignore a plea to stop the suicide. He said there "wasn't one."

Kevorkian mistakenly wrote "Take it off!" twice while typing the report, and it was corrected, Fieger said.

Mrs. Gale said her husband only asked that the mask be removed once, because he had become hot under a tent put around him to enclose the gas flow. She said he never asked again for the suicide to stop.

Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson received the questioned document Wednesday. On Thursday, the day a new state law took effect making assisting suicide a felony, police searched Kevorkian's Royal Oak apartment and found a second copy.

Kevorkian's copy had the second reference to "Take it off" whited out and changed, Thompson said.

"The fact that this document ... with him asking the mask be taken off and the mask was continued, takes it out of the realm of assisted suicide and puts it into the realm of attempted homicide," Thompson said.

That attention by prosecutors is the reason Operation Rescue is holding off on its plans, Mahoney said.

Agriculture water dominance lessens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although agriculture dictated water policy in the Western states for decades, cities and environmental groups are gaining clout in the debate over managing supplies, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said Friday.

Western water spoke for years with one voice: "Western agriculture," Bradley told an Environmental and Energy Study Institute briefing on water resources. "Within the past year, new power centers have begun to coalesce."

Environmentalists and urban advocates cooperated in 1992 negotiations to reform California's Central Valley Project, whose canals and reservoirs supply about 20 percent of the state's water. Agriculture is big business in California, where it constitutes 2 percent of the state economy while using 85 percent of the water.

In the end, the omnibus water bill that Bradley helped shape increased the price of Central Valley Project water that long had been subsidized by the federal government. It allocated some of the supply to rivers and streams to protect threatened fish populations and it provided for the transfer of water from farmers to expanding cities like Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Barbara. It also required the project to pay its environmental costs.

'Western water spoke for years with one voice: Western agriculture.'

— Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey

Bradley, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee on Water and Power, called enactment of the legislation "a clear sign that Congress is looking toward 'water, policy and water laws that impose regulatory or market pressures on agriculture to use less water and to ensure that the water it does use re-enters the environment in a form compatible with other public needs."

But Stuart Somach, an attorney who represents farmers in the Central Valley Project Water

Association, said that agriculture is being hurt by new regulations that divert water to environmental interests.

"After six years of drought, we finally have more water in the system, but the regulations have reallocated that water toward the environment, so we have perpetuation of the drought by regulation," Somach said in a telephone interview from his office in Sacramento, Calif.

"I don't think there's enough concern being raised about all the consequences on the national and international front is to reducing the agricultural capability of the Central Valley of California. It has been the breadbasket, not just of the state, but of the nation."

Jason Pelletier, manager of the Central Valley Project Water Association, charged the legislation already has precipitated a drop in land values and has lowered expectations about the land's future productivity.

"The change was forced because of the political correctness of helping the environment," Pelletier charged.

New studies Soap star OD'd on alcohol, drugs question breast tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Guidelines for breast cancer screening could be changed by some medical organizations once they fully analyze new studies showing mammograms may provide little benefit for women before age 50, officials said Friday.

With an eye on the guidelines, the new data is being examined closely at such organizations as the National Cancer Institute, the American Cancer Society, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the American College of Physicians.

Dr. Gerald P. Murphy, chief medical officer at the American Cancer Society, said his group is examining the new studies, but "not all of the information has been evaluated, and there are no conclusions that can be made on this as yet."

Both the society and the National Cancer Institute recommend that women start receiving mammograms, X-rays that screen for breast cancer, every year or two after age 40.

But at least one group, the American College of Physicians, decided as long ago as 1989 to recommend starting routine mammograms at age 50.

A study published Thursday in the Online Journal of Current Clinical Trials concluded that mammography screening for breast cancer offers no long-term survival benefit for women under 40, but the test does save lives among women age 50 and older.

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Morrison, who played the role of Caleb Snyder on the CBS soap "As the World Turns," died from an accidental overdose of alcohol and illegal drugs, a toxicology report showed Friday.

Morrison, 33, died from "acute intoxication caused by the combination of ethanol, cocaine and opiates," said Ellen Borskove, a spokeswoman for the city Medical Examiner's office.

Details on the exact types and amounts of alcohol and drugs involved were not available, she said.

Morrison died in his sleep Feb. 18 at a friend's Manhattan apartment. The two reportedly had gone out drinking at an Irish pub before going back to her apartment.

Morrison had played the role of Snyder on the CBS soap opera since June 1988. At the time of his death, his character was enmeshed in a reconciliation with his ex-wife, who has had a child with Snyder's brother.

Healy leaves NIH, but Clinton retains Kessler at FDA

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — The director of the National Institutes of Health, Bernadine P. Healy, said Friday she will resign June 30, because "it was made clear" that President Clinton wants her out after two years in which the agency was enrolled in the politics of abortion.

But Food and Drug Administration chief David Kessler, another top health officer held over from the Bush administration, will be retained, the Health and Human Services Department confirmed.

Both had lobbied hard to stay on the job. Healy, 48, a cardiologist, lamented that the controversy over the Bush administration's ban against using aborted fetuses for tissue transplantation research had "dogged" her tenure at the NIH.

President says his plan will open barriers to world trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton vowed Friday to help U.S. companies "compete, not retreat" in international trade and said his tough economic program should be met with market-opening moves by U.S. trading partners.

With his plan to trim the nation's budget deficit, the United States is "getting its own economic house in order," the president said.

He laid down a tough line on his determination to work for the elimination of trade barriers he said were restricting the sale of U.S. products abroad.

"It is time for us to make trade a priority element of American security," Clinton said in a speech on the global economy. "We must compete, not retreat. Our exports are especially important to us."

Clinton's speech came on the eve of a meeting in London of finance ministers and central bankers from the world's seven largest industrial democracies.

His first speech on the international economy, Clinton said the United States and its major allies should stop working at "cross purposes" and do a better job of harmonizing their economic policies.

He said 20 of the world's 24 developed nations had increased trade barriers in recent years instead of lowering them, calling it "a powerful testament to the difficulty of trying to maintain a high wage, high-growth economy."

"A prosperous America is not only good for Americans — it is absolutely essential for the prosperity of the whole world," Clinton told an audience at American University.

Wearing a blue academic robe — the president paid homage to former President John F. Kennedy, who made a speech at American University in 1969 on the need to find "peace in the face of nuclear confrontation" — the finest speech he ever delivered.

Clinton recalled growing into adulthood in the shadows of the Cold War, but declared that now "democracy is on the march everywhere in the world. It is a new day and a great moment for Americans."

"Open and cooperative commerce will enrich us as a nation," he said.

He sought to make clear that adoption of his economic program would also help the rest of the world economically.

"If we set a new direction at home, we can set a new direction for the world as well," Clinton said.

Clinton's speech came a day after he floated the idea of even more new taxes than the ones in his new economic program — suggesting he might consider raising taxes on cigarettes and other health-risk products to help finance his call for a national health insurance plan.

"I think health-related taxes are different," Clinton said Thursday.

Vice President Gore, appearing today in a one-hour, half-in-show on NBC's "Today" show, said that such an increase still hasn't become a formal proposal.

Gore said "it would be premature to get into the details" of the health reform package because it "hasn't been written."

Clinton discussed health-insurance financing at a news conference at which 24 business and labor leaders endorsed his economic program and as Republicans stepped up their attack on his economic package.

Gore used the morning television time to plug the economic plan, urging viewers to write their congressmen in support of it.

In recent days, Clinton has renewed his commitment to protect U.S. companies against what he views as unfair European subsidies. After meeting with British Prime Minister John Major on Wednesday, Clinton said he hoped to dislodge stalled efforts for new world trading rules.

But the domestic economy will still dominate his time.

White House and congressional sources say the administration is signaling that it would not object if some Democrats targeted the atom-smashing superconducting super collider and the space station for spending cuts.

But Gore said today that though "some Democrats" have singled out the two projects for cuts, "We disagree."

Analysts find plenty to praise, blast in Clinton's economic plan

Dallas Morning News

WASHINGTON — Welcome to the world of federal budgeting, where tax increases are called spending cuts and spending is called investment.

President Clinton's economic package has been heralded as one of the most honest in years. But budget analysts say the new administration also has resorted to some time-honored accounting maneuvers to meet his deficit targets.

"Let's face it, every administration will put the best possible face on what they propose," said Carol Cox Wait, executive director of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. "I cannot remember an administration that did not sell a budget on their own ground."

Judged against the budget proposals of the Reagan and Bush administrations, Clinton's blueprint looks quite credible, according to Wait and other budget experts.

"It is much more honest," said Stanley Collender, director of federal budget policy for Price Waterhouse.

White House budget director Leon Panetta assured the House Budget Committee that "there's no black holes, there's no caps, there's no phony baloney. It's all there."

But Republicans have found fodder for criticism in the variety of entries and techniques used in Clinton's economic plan, which calls for nearly $500 billion in spending cuts and new taxes. Among the critics' examples: $21 billion in savings from raising taxes on some Social Security recipients — which is listed as a spending reduction.

"It would be more apt to say this plan is based on rabbits and huts, because the numbers throughout are based on pure magic," said Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, chairman of the House Republican Conference. For instance, critics concede that the Social Security savings may actually cut the deficit. But this is not a spending cut, they say, and should have been listed among the tax increases. Administration officials defend the practice, saying it reflects a cut in benefits and therefore is a spending reduction.

Most budget experts agreed that the net effect is to make the budget appear as if it contains more spending cuts and fewer tax increases — an important political consideration in selling the plan to the public and Congress.

"That is not a new gimmick. They just repeated it," said Collender, noting similar entries in the Reagan and Bush budgets.

Critics also charge that the president's budget writers are claiming credit for up to $123 billion in spending cuts already required by the 1990 budget agreement. Other experts say that record did not identify specific cuts, and that it was Clinton who made the politically difficult choices to cut programs.

Analysts suggested a number of other areas where savings would be questionable.

Some of the president's figures are based on improved management of the federal government — $15.6 billion from "streamlining government" and "other administrative savings." They also rely on projections about the future course of interest rates and drastically higher fees on government services.

What the plan means to you

Aiming to spread the burden down Wall Street and Main Street alike, President Clinton proposes to raise taxes on businesses and middle- and upper-class Americans, while also proposing tax breaks to stimulate the economy.

Income tax: Add a 36% tax bracket on taxable income exceeding $115,000 for individuals, $140,000 for couples and $10 million for businesses. Revenue estimate: $156.9 billion from 1993 through 1998.	No direct impact.	No direct impact.	Also creates 12% "millionaire's surcharge" on ordinary taxable income above $250,000. Boosts alternative minimum tax to 26% on AMT income less than $175,000 and to 28% on AMT income exceeding that amount.	Raises the income tax rate from 34% to 36% for companies with taxable income of more than $10 million. Revenue estimate: $30.6 billion from 1993 through 1998.
Social Security: Increase taxable benefits on income exceeding $25,000 for individuals, $32,000 for couples. Revenue estimate: $21.4 billion from 1994 through 1998.	No direct impact.	Eighty-five percent of benefits would be taxed instead of 50%. For retirees age 65 in 1993 receiving the maximum retirement benefit, $13,536 a year, an additional $4,738 of the benefit would be taxed according to their bracket.	Eighty-five percent of benefits would be taxed instead of 50%. For retirees age 65 in 1993 receiving the maximum retirement benefit, $13,536 a year, an additional $4,738 of the benefit would be taxed according to their bracket.	No direct impact.
Energy tax: Would raise prices on gasoline about 7.5 cents a gallon, natural gas about 8.75 cents per therm and the average U.S. monthly electric bill by $2.25. Revenue estimate: $7.14 billion from 1994 through 1998.	No American will be able to duck the effect of the energy tax, though its impact will vary widely from one region to another. When the tax is fully in place in 1996, the administration estimates the typical family of four with an income of $40,000 will spend an extra $118 a year. Companies also would pay higher prices on goods if manufacturers pass along the increase.
TAX BREAKS
Earned-income credit: Expand credit to apply to more taxpayers.	Would cover taxpayers with earned incomes up to $30,000. Currently, the credit is limited to incomes less than $22,700, and the maximum credit is $2,211.	No direct impact.	No direct impact.	No direct impact.
Capital gains: Reduce tax for investments made in small businesses.	Lower- and middle-income Americans are not likely to invest because of the amount of money required and the degree of risk involved.	Cuts capital-gains tax rate in half, to 14%, on income from investments made directly in small businesses and held for five years or more.	Mostly will help start-up companies seeking "seed" capital.

<sup>3</sup> Income for Social Security taxation purposes is defined as adjusted gross income plus non-taxable interest plus the taxable portion of Social Security benefits, currently 50%.

Give us a hand to prevent child abuse in Idaho.

Kids. They're Idaho's most precious resource. But last year, over 4,000 children in Idaho were neglected and abused. It is painfully clear that child abuse costs everyone.

This year, you can have a hand in preventing child abuse by donating to the Idaho Children's Trust Fund on your Idaho income tax return. With the funds you donated last year, 14 preventative programs were implemented throughout the state.

It's easy to lend a hand. Just look for the special Children's Trust Fund line on your Idaho Form 40 or 40EZ. Then write in your donation of $5, $10, $15 or more. Or tell your tax preparer to donate for you.

The dollars you give today are a healthy investment in Idaho's future.

So give us a hand this year to prevent child abuse before it starts. And together we can make a difference.

Somali capital quieter

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Nigerian soldiers traded fire with a sniper Friday morning, but signs of calm were returning to Mogadishu after two days of rioting.

Merchants began opening up for business in their ramshackle stalls of corrugated steel. The remains of bonfires from burning tires and junk still littered some streets, but traffic navigated around them.

At the city's main traffic circle, Nigerian troops in the U.S.-led coalition fired repeatedly in the air in a show of force.

"Workers heard some loud gunfire this morning, but it's much less hairy than yesterday," Cynthia Osterman of the relief group CARE said Friday in Nairobi, Kenya, after talking by radio with the group's workers in Mogadishu.

Friday morning, Nigerian troops atop a hotel used by the foreign news media poured heavy gunfire into a building across the street in response to sniper fire. Several troops entered the building, captured seven men and seized one weapon, a Nigerian commander said.

Sniper fire also had come from the building the day before, and the Nigerians blasted holes in it Thursday to try to flush out the attackers.

One of the captured men said some were friends of a security guard checking the building.

Gunfire and grenades rocked the same area for five hours Thursday as soldiers pounded at snipers. The shooting — the heaviest in the capital in weeks — was mostly by Nigerian soldiers, who fired without restraint at any niche they believed might harbor a sniper.

U.S. military officials said the snipers were suspected of being Aided supporters because the violence occurred in an area he nominally controls. They said the snipers could have been acting on their own.

Reports say at least six Somalis were killed, and five U.S. Marines and two Nigerian soldiers wounded in violence that started Wednesday when backers of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid claimed U.S.-led forces helped a rival defeat an ally in Kismayo.

Airdrop preparations gain speed across hungry Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Preparations for an American airdrop to hungry eastern Bosnia shifted into higher gear on Friday as U.S. officials briefed NATO allies and met with U.N. staff to complete the details.

At a U.S. base in Germany, troops started packing tons of food and medical supplies into large bundles that could be parachuted into Bosnia on short notice. American defense officials said the operation could begin over the weekend.

In Brussels, Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher briefed America's NATO allies on the airdrop, intended primarily for isolated Muslim enclaves besieged by Serbs. The plan drew praise, but few, concrete offers of assistance from allied powers that regard the operation as risky and already have relief and peacekeeping missions on the ground in Bosnia.

Speaking on NBC's "Today" show, Vice President Al Gore said the airdrop would be "small, but in these isolated pockets it's the only way."

In the inaccessible eastern towns, hungry Bosnians have swamped the few convoys that have managed to get through. Now they are looking to the skies for help.

"Our hope is to watch for presents from heaven," said Fadil Heljic, a ham radio operator in the besieged town of Zepa.

Fighting resumed in Sarajevo, ending four days of relative calm. Serb artillery pounded the strategic western suburb of Stup, and an Egyptian U.N. peacekeeper was reported killed Thursday by a sniper. His death brought to 30 the number of peacekeepers killed so far in Bosnia and neighboring Croatia.

Bosnian officials hope greater U.S. involvement will force the warring factions to finally agree on peace. More peace talks are to be held in New York next week.

In Brussels, members of the North

Atlantic Treaty Organization saw the American plan as a supplement to U.N. efforts on the ground. Peacekeeping forces, including troops from Britain and France, are escorting food convoys.

"They go hand in hand," said Britain's foreign secretary, Douglas Hurd.

The Clinton administration decided to go with an airdrop to skirt Serb fighters who repeatedly have held up or diverted convoys in eastern Bosnia.

A 60-truck convoy carrying supplies for U.N. peacekeepers in Sarajevo was held up for the third day in Zvornik in eastern Bosnia, said Elizabeth Baldwin, a U.N. spokeswoman in Zagreb, Croatia.

A State Department team met with officials of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva to discuss where the aid parcels should be dropped and what they should contain.

U.S. seizes millions from smugglers

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — More than 100 U.S. agents and police on Friday seized millions of dollars worth of homes, businesses and islands owned by a Colombian-led group of alleged drug smugglers and money launderers.

Twenty-three people were arrested in the sweep, which followed a nearly three-year investigation called Operation Al Capone, officials said.

Officials from the Drug Enforcement Administration said the group shipped heroin and at least a ton of cocaine to New York, Boston, Miami, Philadelphia and other U.S. cities.

The DEA's chief in San Juan,

William Mitchell, said the cocaine shipments included 760 pounds in a six-week period. Most of the cocaine was sent via couriers on commercial airlines, which routinely do not pass through customs checks on domestic flights from the U.S. commonwealth.

He estimated the value of the properties already seized at roughly $9 million, but Puerto Rican police said up to $20 million in assets may be involved. Authorities said they included:

- The remote 75-acre Boat Cays, eight small islands a mile off Puerto Rico's south-central coast.
- Homes and 400 acres of choice land near Culebra and Jajome, two mountain towns known for flower growing and cattle grazing.

- An apartment building in colonial Old San Juan, a home in the fashionable Condado neighborhood of the capital and a business in the Hato Rey commercial district.
- Properties on the northeastern island of Culebra, which police said were to be developed into a tourist complex.
- Several boats and cars, including one Mercedes.
- Seven of 10 people listed on arrest warrants were captured by midday Friday as the search continued, Mitchell said.
- Three were from the Colombian cocaine trafficking center of Cali.

Angry Hindus disrupt Parliament

NEW DELHI, India — Angry members of a Hindu nationalist party disrupted Parliament Friday to condemn a massive police crackdown that thwarted an anti-government rally the party had tried to organize in the capital.

"What New Delhi witnessed yesterday was the most exceptional assault on the citizens of the state," Jaswant Singh, a senior leader of the right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party, told reporters.

"We cannot be cowed down by sticks and bullets," said Atal Behari Vajpayee, another senior party leader.

On Thursday, riot police fired tear gas and water cannons to prevent tens of thousands of Hindu nationalists from assembling near Parliament to hold the rally, called by the Bharatiya Janata Party.

Chinese teen-ager kills boy for fee

BEIJING — A teen-ager kidnapped and killed a 6-year-old boy in an effort to raise $1.40 for school fees, a state-run newspaper reported Friday.

The Legal Daily said the killing caused a public outcry, with some people demanding better moral education for youths and others decrying the pressure put on students to pay school fees.

Education is supposed to be free in China, but schools say state-funding is inadequate and they are increasingly charging fees for heating for schoolrooms, books, pencils and other items.

The newspaper said the killing took place last month in Dongzhonggang Village in Hebei province, in eastern China.

Customs fines Madonna's printer

TOKYO — Customs officials have fined a printing company that produced the Japanese version of "Sex," Madonna's explicit photographic tribute to her libido.

The Tokyo Customs Office has ruled that portions of Madonna's book are obscene and has seized copies brought in by travelers at airports.

Customs officials said Friday that Toppan Printing Co. got the book's imported photographic plates past inspectors by filing a false report that said the plates were of written text, not photographs. The fine was for the false report.

House panel seeks limit on campaign funding

BOISE (AP) — Members of the House State Affairs Committee say they want to limit contributions to Idaho political campaigns — but not too much.

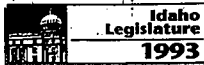

The committee approved a bill Friday that would slap a $1,000 ceiling on campaign contributions in local and legislative races and $500 for statewide races.

But it defeated a proposal from Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Boise, to impose even tougher limits. Hansen wanted to restrict contributions to $200 for legislative races and $500 for statewide campaigns.

Committee members didn't like other restrictions imposed by Hansen. One was that a candidate couldn't take a contribution from anyone living outside his or her district.

The other was a disclaimer that must appear on any campaign literature, saying it was paid for by the "personal wealth" of the candidate or immediate family if the candidate didn't have contributions.

Rep. Jesse Beratin, R-Boise, the first Hispanic elected to the Idaho Legislature for many years, said he has an "extended family" of many people who don't live in his district.

He said he's happy that they supported his campaign. Hansen said Beratin doesn't represent those people; he represents only the people who live in his district.

There has been much discussion this session about campaign reform, although nothing has been enacted. The Legislature took another step toward it Thursday when House State Affairs authorized introduction of a term limit proposal.

The proposed constitutional amendment, prepared by Rep. Jim Storch, D-Sandpoint, would limit members of the Senate and House to six terms of two years each and state and county officials to three terms, or 12 years.

State Affairs also added another campaign finance reform under the Sunshine Law. Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysursa said current laws leave a big gap from early in the campaign until seven days before the election.

The bill sent to the full House Friday requires an Oct. 10 report. It also makes it harder for candidates to "play games" with the critical final pre-election report, Ysursa said.

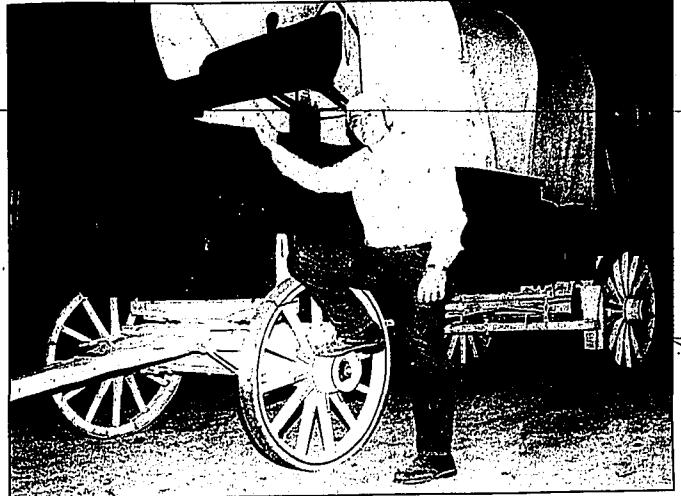

That report must be filed with the secretary of state's office in Boise by 5 p.m. on the deadline, he said.

Rep. Judi Danielson, R-Council, said it costs far more to travel her farflung legislative district than Hansen's compact Boise district. "We travel 1,000 miles a week just to cover our districts," Danielson said.

American Civil Liberties Union spokesman Bruce Bittline said limiting contributions restricts free speech rights.

"Campaign disclosure is the way to deal with this," he said. Rep. Pam Ahrens, R-Boise, pulled out the checkbook from her campaign fund to report she spent up to $700 for a newspaper ad in her last campaign and a direct mailing cost $2,800.

She campaigned door-to-door, but "it costs money in this society to get your message out." She is a cosponsor of the bill calling for higher limits.

Truck shop owner Jerry Schubert will lead the Oregon Trail wagon train this summer to celebrate the 1993 Oregon Trail Sesquicentennial.

Oregon man prepares to drive wagon train celebrating old trail

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — Jerry Schubert is leaving his real-life job running a truck shop to step back in time 150 years this summer.

He will be wagon master on the official Oregon Trail sesquicentennial wagon train.

"We're going to be a traveling museum," said Schubert, 62, as he showed off one of his wagons in a barn at the Pendleton Roundup grounds.

As part of the anniversary of the "great migration" of 1843, the Oregon Trail Coordinating Council is sponsoring a wagon train that traces the last part of the route taken by the pioneers.

Run by Metropolitan Events of Portland, the wagon train embarks from the Idaho-Wyoming border June 25 and rolls into Oregon City Sept. 4. Organizers had hoped to cover the whole route, starting in Independence, Mo., but couldn't raise enough money.

"I can't wait," said Schubert. "I wish we were ready to go tomorrow."

Schubert's family came to Oregon on the train around the turn of the century, but that hasn't stopped him from falling in love with horse-drawn wagons.

He's a "past director" of the Pendleton Roundup rodeo, and for the past 10 years has spent summers with his friends tracing parts of the Oregon Trail through rugged Eastern Oregon in vintage wagons.

Unlike the pioneers, who preferred oxen for their hardiness and strength, Schubert runs a team of black Percheron horses. Schubert plows with the horses in the spring and boards them at rodeo steer roper Paul Rice's place just outside town for the winter.

As many as 10,000 people will be able to walk or ride along with the modern wagon train over the summer. It costs $39 a day to walk along, the way most of the emigrants did. Riding a horse or wagon costs $59. Bringing your own wagon — wooden wheels with iron tires, please — is $99 a day.

That includes certified feed for your animals. The limit is seven days. Meals will be catered by Steve and Kelly Andersson of La Grande, owners of Oregon Trail Outfitters. They have pored over stacks of pioneer journals to develop authentic menus.

"Obviously, there are some aspects of authenticity relative to the original crossing by the original pioneers that do not bear repeating this time around," said Mrs. Andersson. "We're not doing prairie dogs."

They will be doing buffalo stew, sourdough hotcakes and raspberry cobbler, cooked on wood-fueled stoves. They'll also offer a vegetarian alternative every day that goes beyond the standard emigrant fare of beans, beans and more beans.

Folks who want to sleep historically can rent a teepee or one of the frontier tents patterned after those used by "The Oregon Trail" author, Francis Parkman in 1846.

"The legacy passed on to us embracing the struggle against the elements, those stories are going to come alive for thousands of people this summer," Mrs. Andersson said. "This isn't just a summer job for us. This is the opportunity of a lifetime."

Man faces charge of murdering brother

BLACKFOOT — Norman Jere Alford, 44, is scheduled to appear in 7th District Court March 8 on a charge that he murdered his brother and wounded his wife.

After a two-day preliminary hearing that ended Friday, Alford was sent to district court to face first-degree murder charges along with aggravated battery and using a firearm to commit serious crimes.

Alford is accused of killing Philip Alford, 39, and wounding Sheryl Alford, 36, in a shooting incident Feb. 12 at the family home at Blackfoot.

Witnesses testified that all three were living in the Alford's rented home when the shootings occurred. Alford is charged with shooting his brother four times in the face and chest with a .22-caliber handgun.

County commissioner in trouble again

SANDPOINT — Bonner County Commissioner Gene Brown, chastised last month for not paying his property taxes on time, has been cited for building an addition to his home north of Sandpoint without a permit.

Building official Bob Garrison said he had received anonymous complaints from about a dozen residents about construction at Brown's home.

An inspector visited on Feb. 11 and photographed a small secondary addition that Brown never obtained a building permit to construct. Garrison said it is a violation of the county's building code and Brown must get a permit, the cost of which is based on the value of the addition.

Brown said the dormer and window were added to his 17-year-old home two or three years ago — long before he became a commissioner.

Crapo pays way on trip to New Jersey

BOISE — Rep. Michael Crapo, R-Idaho, says he's paying his own way to a weekend Republican congressional retreat so there will be no perception he's being influenced by special-interest lobbyists who are paying for the event.

"I paid my own way to avoid the perceptions that I'm being influenced," said the freshman congressman. "There is a very clear problem with trips like this, where lobbyists pay for conferences." Crapo said organizers told him the three-day trip to the Merrill-Lynch Center, Princeton, N.J., would cost him about $350. He said he will pay it out of personal funds.

INEL changes laundry to save money

IDAHO FALLS — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's central laundry will be closed this fall and the services subcontracted to a private company.

EG&G Idaho Inc., the U.S. Department of Energy contractor that runs the laundry, said it expects to save nearly half a million dollars, and the shutdown should cause no layoffs.

INEL officials said the nine Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union employees at the laundry will have the opportunity to return to the EG&G labor pool, and two nonunion administrators will be reassigned.

But the move may continue the controversial practice of shipping contaminated clothing to private, out-of-state laundry facilities.

Montevieu youth killed by tractor

MONTIEVIEW — A 6-year-old Montevieu boy was killed when his clothing got caught in a tractor's power-take-off shaft, Jefferson County Sheriff Blair Olsen said.

Just after 8 p.m. Thursday, Kenneth Edward McCulloch was running between a tractor idled in the family's yard and a trailer hitched to it when his clothing became entangled in the rotating shaft.

Olsen said the boy was pulled around and hit his head on the back bar of the tractor. He died immediately of massive head wounds and was discovered by his father within five minutes.

Idaho woman dies in Nevada accident

FALLON, Nev. — A 40-year-old Idaho woman was killed in a single-car rollover on Interstate 80 about 20 miles east of Ferley, the Nevada Highway Patrol said.

Investigators said Sharon Gorsline of Boise was not wearing a seat belt and was thrown from the vehicle Thursday.

Her husband, Warren, was wearing a seat belt and received only minor injuries.

Troopers said the Gorslines were westbound when the car drifted off the right side of the road. Warren Gorsline overcorrected and the vehicle rolled.

Rollover claims man

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A Bonner County man has died in a one-vehicle accident on U.S. Highway 95.

Shane K. Shuts, 23, Sandpoint, was pronounced dead at the accident scene Thursday morning. Shuts was traveling southbound at a high rate of speed when he fell asleep, the Idaho State Police say.

Church residences taxable

BOISE (AP) — Idaho residences used by leaders of the Mormon Church and the Roman Catholic Church don't qualify for exemption from property taxes, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court on Friday released two decisions, both written by Justice Charles McDevitt. Both were 4-1 rulings with Justice Byron Johnson dissenting.

McDevitt said the law allowing property tax exemption for religious "parsonages" defines them as buildings owned by an organized religion and used as the home of a minister who ministers to a specific localized congregation that gathers to worship at frequent and regular intervals.

Disallowed was the tax exemption for the home of the president of the Boise Mormon Temple, and two Boise buildings owned by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Boise.

They are used by the Most Rev. Tod B. Brown, bishop of the Diocese of Idaho, and other church administrators.

In both cases, the Supreme Court said the officials perform administrative duties and do not preach on a regular basis to distinct congregations.

Johnson scolded the other court members for using outdated terms to deny exemptions that obviously are justified. He said the terms "parson" and "parsonage" are archaic terms from an earlier time.

"Both the Legislature and this court have more recently used the term 'clergyman' to refer to the leader of a church or religious organization," he said.

There would be no problem granting the exemption if church leaders were simply called clergyman, he said.

In both cases, the Board of Tax Appeals ruled against the exemption. The churches appealed. Two 4th District judges in separate cases allowed the exemption. Ada County appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court ruling Friday reversed the district court decisions.

Spokesmen for both churches could not be reached for comment.

The Supreme Court said the president of the Idaho Boise Mission serves spiritual and physical needs of 157 full-time missionaries working in an area from LaGrande, Ore., to Jackson, Wyo., and Riggins to Jackpot.

State board drives for higher tuition

LEWISTON (AP) — Out-of-state students who study in Idaho universities could soon see their tuition rise rapidly.

The state Board of Education, which wrapped up a two-day meeting in Lewiston on Friday, decided to move quickly toward charging those students for the full cost of their education.

No one is sure exactly what the full cost is. But out-of-state tuition and fees at Idaho universities now total about $4,000 annually, at least $1,000 less than the full price.

While officials at Lewis-Clark State College complained about raising tuition for non-residents that much in one fell swoop, board members Joseph Parkinson and Diane Bilyeu insisted the panel wants action now.

"The more (non-resident) students we take, the quicker we go broke with that system," Parkinson said.

Preliminary estimates show the full cost to be about $5,100 at Boise State University, $5,700 at Idaho State University, $6,700 at the University of Idaho and $5,000 at Lewis-Clark State College.

Those amounts do not include costs to repair and maintain campus buildings.

Out-of-state students who come to Idaho to attend college pay close to the lowest tuition in the Western region, a survey of selected Western states found. Those students pay more to go to college in Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

Most universities in Alaska, Wyoming and Utah also are more expensive for out-of-state students than Idaho ones.

In other Western states, out-of-state tuition typically ranges from $5,000 to $8,000 annually. But at the University of Colorado-Boulder, it is $11,322.

Each of Idaho's universities and Lewis-Clark State College is in the process of increasing out-of-state tuition over the next several years to better approach the full cost.

LCSC Financial Vice President Dean Froehlich said a dramatic rise in tuition would likely price some out-of-state students out of a college education.

Froehlich said LCSC would have to raise fees by about 40 percent to bring them in line with the board's request. He added all the schools are operating under a three-year timeline for raising fees, and that method was easier on students already in the system.

ISU's financial vice president Robert Pearce was concerned that 30 percent of the UI's student body comes from out-of-state, which would give it a disproportionately large sum of extra cash once fees were increased.

Administration costs target of inquiry from governor

LEWISTON (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus says administrative costs at Idaho's universities are too high, and he has asked school officials for an accounting of their expenses posthaste.

But a champion of such savings disputes Andrus' aim.

"I don't think that I'm willing to concede now that administrative costs are excessive," Board President Karl Shurtliff replied Thursday in Lewiston at the board's monthly meeting. "But I think we can do better, there's no question about it."

In a letter sent to Shurtliff Tuesday, Andrus said preparation for next year's budget reaffirmed his belief that administrative costs at our education institutions are excessive and lack proper controls and accountability. "He did not specify which expenses he considered."

The governor asked the schools to provide him with information about administrative costs within two weeks.

Shurtliff has been a proponent of such savings. He has said it would save taxpayer money to consolidate some administrative functions of Lewis-Clark State College and nearby Idaho.

Total administration costs at the four schools nearly doubled in the same 10-year period, rising from $14.7 million to $28.3 million. But those costs as a percentage of the total combined budgets remained virtually unchanged at 13.5 percent.

Craig camp: New talks on NAFTA not likely

TWIN FALLS — A spokesman for Republican Sen. Larry Craig said Friday that the Clinton administration is unlikely to reopen negotiations with Mexico on the sugar provisions of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"The administration is committed to keeping the agreement intact," said Tom Dayley, Craig agriculture policy aide in Washington, D.C., in a telephone interview.

However, Dayley said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor visited Craig this week and promised that the potential for sudden "surges" of imported Mexican sugar would be discussed with Mexico in a "side agreement" to the treaty, and ground rules would be set for dealing with "surges."

The U.S. sugar industry has asked that NAFTA be renegotiated to redefine corn syrup as a sugar. The idea was to prevent Mexico from creating a sugar "surplus" by using corn syrup in its own food and drink manufacturing, and then exporting "surplus" sugar to the United States.

Gas prices drop 11 cents; some prices below $1 mark

BOISE — Gasoline prices at Idaho service stations have dropped 11 cents since Christmas, and some motorists are seeing pump prices below $1 a gallon, according to the latest Idaho AAA survey.

The Idaho chapter of the American Automobile Association said a check of stations along major travel routes shows the average price of self-serve unleaded gas in Idaho is $1.07. The national average is $1.093, and only Wyoming among surrounding states has a lower average price.

Dave Carlson, Idaho AAA spokesman, said stable supplies and reduced seasonal demand are responsible for the lower overall prices. But he said some motorists may be confused by the wide disparity in prices in different locations around the state.

In February 1992, a similar Idaho AAA survey showed the average pump price at $1 a gallon.

In other states in the West, the most recent survey put the average prices of self-serve unleaded gas at $1.237 in California, $1.159 in Colorado, $1.076 in Montana, $1.254 in Nevada, $1.112 in Utah, $1.142 in Washington and 98.9 cents in Wyoming.

Senate State Affairs kills campaign contributions bill

BOISE — Democratic Sen. John Peavey of Carey has lost yet another round in his attempt to strengthen Idaho's campaign finance laws.

Republicans on the Senate State Affairs Committee were joined by moderate Democrat Mary Lloyd of Roswell on Friday to kill Peavey's proposed limits on campaign contributions to legislative candidates. The bill would have slapped a $500 limit on individuals and a $1,000 limit on political-action committees.

Peavey, who has filed a certification of a treasurer for the 1994 governor's race, argued that the limits would help curtail the high cost of campaigns.

But Lloyd said she had not seen any financial abuse in Idaho's campaign system, and Senate President Pro Tem Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot was unconvinced that Peavey's bill would actually hold campaign spending down. In fact, Twigg said political activists would find ways around the bill.

Bellevue accepting P&Z applications for 3-year term

BELLEVUE — The Bellevue City Council is looking for a resident interested in filling a vacancy on the five-member Planning and Zoning Commission.

Commissioner Mike Zaponi's term has expired, and he is not interested in seeking reappointment, according to Mayor Dennis Wright. The position is for a three-year volunteer position.

The commission meets twice per month, according to city secretary Geri Rosenstein.

To be eligible for the commission, a person must be of voting age, and have lived in Bellevue for at least five years, she said. Anyone interested in serving should contact City Hall at 788-128.

Police search for dairy robbery suspects

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four men who deputies say robbed a pair of Buell-area dairy workers at gunpoint Thursday night remained on the loose Friday.

Sgt. Dan Mort of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department said no shots were fired and nobody was hurt during the incident, in which $220 was taken from two men working at the H and H Dairy two miles east and three miles south of Buell.

Two men walked into the dairy barn at about 8:30 p.m. and asked Jaime Ramos, 48, about job openings, Mort said.

Ramos directed the men to the owner's house, but they followed him into the pump room where two other men leveled what looked to be .22-caliber rifles at Ramos, the deputy said.

The first pair of men grabbed two shotguns that had been placed in the pump room, and the four tied Ramos with orange baling twine, after stealing $20 from his wallet, Mort said.

Two of the robbers then went to another area of the barn and held up 26-year-old Jose Mayer, who had $200.

A Remington 12-gauge shotgun also was taken from the dairy office, although valuable computers and other equipment were left untouched, Mort said.

The four men left in a small white car, heading south on 1700 East Road.

The victims, who live near the dairy, gave the following descriptions, Mort said:

• One man was 5-feet, 7-inches to 5-feet, 9-inches tall, 25-30 years old, 225 pounds, stocky, with brown, curly, collar-length hair. He had brown hair, a mustache, and was wearing white pants and a white jacket.

• Another man was 5-feet, 6-inches to 5-feet, 9-inches tall, 19-23 years old and thin at about 150 pounds. He had brown hair, green or blue eyes and wore a camouflage jacket and blue jeans.

• The third man was 5-feet, 7-inches to 5-feet, 9-inches tall, in his 20s and, of medium build at 170 pounds. He had dishwater blond hair, cropped close on top and pulled into a 7-10 inch ponytail. He wore camouflage pants and shirt.

• The victims could give no clear description of the fourth man; except that he wore jeans and a camouflage jacket.

Author encourages audience to venture into own 'belly of the beast'

Author Darius James reads a selection from his book 'Negrophobia' Friday night at CSI.

By Julie Fanselow
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — About a year ago, the rap group Public Enemy was slated to perform at the Boise State University Pavilion — until leader Chuck D., getting wind of Idaho's racist reputation, canceled the gig.

So one couldn't help wonder what writer Darius James was doing in Twin Falls Friday night. But James, the author of "Negrophobia," didn't shy from explaining.

"Unlike Chuck D., I'm not afraid of going into the belly of the beast," James told a group of about 30 people at the College of Southern Idaho, where he read from his work and answered questions.

"Being famous in New York City is one thing," he added. "But being able to talk to the people in other parts of the country is something else." James noted that New Yorkers can be as provincial as people in other parts of the U.S. — and that as an artist, he wanted to escape his home turf to see how Americans elsewhere might relate to his work.

James, 38, also seemed to relish reading to an audience. Sometimes crouching, sometimes sitting on a table, he held his book in one hand, gesturing firmly with his other. His prose was filled with vivid, free-form description and often hilarious — if frequently profane — allusions to sex and pop culture.

Penned in screenplay style and published last year by Citadel Press, "Negrophobia" won James instant national notice and critical acclaim.

"Totally in your face," wrote the prestigious book-review journal Kirkus Reviews. "James' raucous debut is by far the best novel to emerge from New York's Lower East Side literary scene."

"The jury is still out on whether James will achieve his desired effect of 'making people

Judge hands rapist 20-year jail sentence

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former Colorado mail convicted of raping a Twin Falls woman twice near her home could spend the rest of his life in prison.

Calling Edwin Everett Kimball "a lost soul with little to draw on," 5th-District Magistrate John Varin ordered him to serve at least 20 years for the April attack.

Kimball, 32, is a self-described street person from Cortez, Colo., who has not held a steady job since being severely injured in an automobile accident several years ago.

As sheriff's deputies led him out of the courtroom Friday, Kimball was asked for his reaction to the sentence.

He laughed and said, "Praise God, brother."

Kimball's victim, a 32-year-old woman who had moved to Twin Falls a few months earlier, was out for an evening stroll when she met her attacker. The two exchanged a brief greeting and continued on their way.

The woman said during Kimball's trial that she noticed he was following her and she ran away. Thinking she had lost him, she continued walking toward her parents' home where she was staying.

When she got within a couple of blocks, Kimball reappeared and grabbed her, she testified.

He forced her to lie down in a yard behind a large bush that hid them from the road, and raped her twice, while threatening her with a knife, she said.

Kimball then showed the woman his driver's license and she identified him on the street a few days later.

He testified during his trial that he paid the woman $25 for sex and that she became angry when he wouldn't give her more money.

A jury convicted Kimball of two counts of rape, kidnapping, aggravated assault and battery with the intent to commit a serious felony.

Because some of those crimes arose from the same acts, Varin only sentenced Kimball for a single rape charge, kidnapping and aggravated assault, plus an enhanced penalty for the use of a deadly weapon.

With credit for time already served, Kimball will be eligible for parole in 2012. He also was ordered to pay $560 in restitution to the victim.

Deputy Prosecutor J.B. Lothspeich said he was pleased with Varin's sentence.

Please bus young kids, parent asks

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Rural resident Kevin Slade drives about 300 miles a month to pick up his child from kindergarten in Wendell.

"It's a long ways and I'm not the only one," the father of six told the Wendell School Board this week. "There's getting to be a lot of country kids out there. It's really kind of a problem."

Slade said he would like to have the school district bus kindergarten students to and from school.

Board Chairman Gray Solomon said the district cannot afford to run double or triple bus routes just for its kindergarten students. Still, he said, the trustees will look into the matter and discuss it with the bus supervisor.

Suggesting a solution, Slade said 28 school districts in Idaho, including Filer, have all-day kindergarten classes on fewer days. Rather than going to class for three hours, five days a week, he explained, the children attend class all day, two or three days a week.

Trustee Clarence Sparks questioned the ability of 5-year-olds to endure an all-day session. Superintendent Larry Manly said that, in his experience with other districts, the all-day kindergarten system works fine.

Committee likely to approve legislation allowing the early release of prisoners

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — No one at Friday's meeting of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee liked the idea of releasing some state prisoners early, least of all the chairman, Sen. Denton Darrington of Declo.

But nobody had any better ideas for easing the strain on Idaho's overcrowded prison system.

So come Monday, the committee likely will hold its collective nose and approve the early-release bill sponsored by the Idaho Department of Corrections.

The bill would authorize the Commission for Parsons and Parole to release prisoners who are eligible for parole up to eight months before their regular parole date.

Prisoners would be released early only when the state prison system had reached or exceeded 98 percent of capacity for 28 days in a row. In such a case, the correction director would declare an emergency and start releasing prisoners until system capacity fell below 95 percent.

No prisoner would be released whom the Parole Commission had not already approved for parole.

Correction Director Richard Vernon told the committee.

State Affairs clears property-taking bill

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — State agencies would have to make sure they won't unduly impair the rights of private property owners, if a bill approved Friday by the House State Affairs Committee becomes law.

The bill, which was prepared by a coalition of business, agriculture and resource-industry groups, would require agencies to assess whether proposed rules would so limit the use of private property that they would constitute a "taking" of that property.

The measure's sponsor, Rep. Bruce Newcomb, said it's intended to make agencies think twice before imposing mandates on property owners.

"All this bill does is treat our citizens like they're citizens and not members of a feudal system, subservient to a king or some sovereign authority," said Newcomb, a Burley Republican and House

Majority Leader.

A loosely-knit network across the country has been pushing for so-called "takings" legislation on the national, state and local levels. The term comes from the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, which provides that "private property (shall) not be taken for public use without just compensation."

In 1988, then-President Reagan issued an executive order requiring federal takings assessments. Last summer, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a South Carolina beachfront protection law constituted a taking because it banned a developer from building on his land.

Arizona has already passed a law much like this one.

Sun Valley fights losing battle to annex subdivision

By Stephen Schowengent
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — This city continued its quest Friday to complete a neighborhood annexation of Weyyakin subdivision in a race with the city of Ketchum. It will find difficult to win.

Weyyakin is also targeted for annexation by Ketchum. That city's council will hear the first reading Wednesday of a proposed ordinance to enable up to that parcel and four others south of town.

Weyyakin homeowners, in a surprise move Feb. 5, asked for annexation into the city of Sun Valley after residents of the area were polled on their preference.

Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jaquet said Friday that the town also hoped to announce Wednesday an annexation agreement with Reinheimer Foundation, also known as Idaho Parks Foundation.

The Reinheimer Ranch parcel is key to Ketchum's annexation plans because it separates the city from all of the other parcels in the annexation proposal. One of the requirements of annexation is that annexed parcels be contiguous with a city.

The other properties included in Ketchum's annexation plans are: Mortgage Row and Kendall Property, Sun Valley Camping Resort and Gas Co. property, Union Pacific Railroad right-of-way and Pothier and South Baldy Estates subdivisions.

The Ketchum City Council could decide Wednesday to waive the three readings of the ordinance and annex Weyyakin and the four other properties at that time.

"Sun Valley city," on the other hand, will take its next step in the annexation process during a special meeting Monday. At that time, the City Council will act on its planning and zoning commission's recommendations.

The commission voted Friday morning to recommend that the City Council designate Weyyakin as a Conditional Development on the land-use map and zone the land RS-2 (cluster single-family residential) except for Blocks 5 and 8, which should be zoned OS-1 (general recreational).

"We would just like to have the same zoning potential in the city as we have in the county," said Weyyakin Homeowners Association attorney Evan Robertson at the special meeting.

"We are just asking that the underlying potential stay the same," he said. "We don't want to give up the density we are allowed in the county."

If the Sun Valley City Council decides Monday to continue with the Weyyakin annexation request, public notice could be given Wednesday and public comment on the matter could be heard on March 18 at the soonest.

Forestry industry calls for additional clarification of NBC story

The Associated Press

The Intermountain Forestry Industry Association has called on NBC to further clarify what it contends was an inaccurate Jan. 4 "NBC Nightly News" segment alleging environmental damage caused by logging in Idaho's Clearwater National Forest.

Anchorman Tom Brokaw read an apology on Wednesday's "NBC Nightly News" for using what the network said was "inappropriate video to illustrate what was otherwise an accurate report."

But James Riley, executive vice president of the Council of American-based Intermountain Forestry Industry Association, wrote in a letter dated Friday to NBC President Robert Wright that the statement did not resolve the problem.

"Although it is certainly gratifying to see some acknowledgment of the inaccuracies of the original story, I remain seriously concerned that the principle mistrust of the story remains unaddressed," Riley wrote.

Specifically, he said while NBC did say in its apology that video of dead fish in the segment was not from the Clearwater, the network "did imply that it was from another forest in the area and did not counter the original claim that the fish were killed by logging."

In addition, Riley asked that NBC clarify its relationship with the conservation group Lighthawk, which provided the network with aerial footage of an area of Washington's Olympic National Forest burned by a 1975 wildfire.

The Jan. 4 report identified the area as a clear-cut section of the Clearwater, and Riley said his association had been advised that footage of the dead fish also came from Lighthawk.

"If so, we would like to understand how it became 'inadvertently' included in your original story as your February 24th clarification claims," he said. "We also would like to know what standard NBC used to verify the accuracy of Lighthawk's video, and what NBC's relationship to Lighthawk is."

Riley said Friday night that he hoped to hear from NBC in the coming week. If the network does not agree to clear up the remaining alleged problems, he said, the association might still sue.

"We're very close to that point now, and we have by no means discounted" a lawsuit, he said. "But quite frankly, we don't have the time to pursue a protracted legal case against NBC."

The Intermountain Forestry Industry Association represents about 80 forest products mills throughout the Northern Rockies. But Riley said loggers and other forestry workers throughout the nation remain outraged at NBC's report.

Driver pleads not guilty to DUI

The Times-News

JEROME — The driver of a truck that almost killed a Jerome girl pled not guilty to a felony charge of aggravated driving under the influence.

Chris Lee Kiser was driving the truck that nearly killed Kathleen McKay, 23, in January.

A date for a jury trial has not been set.

The 34-year-old Twin Falls man was free on bond from his sixth drunken driving arrest when his pickup plowed into McKay near Jerome.

The pre-meditated victim remains in the ER's Rehabilitation Hospital in Boise. "She is doing very well," Betty Jean McKay-Kathleen's mother, said.

"According to the doctors, Kathleen does have brain damage. With the type of head injury she had, the doctors said it will take a good two years before it will be known how bad the brain damage is," she said. "But if you went and sit down and talked to her you'd know we've been handed a bucket of miracles." The mother said, "I know she will go on to med school," she said.

Kiser's alcohol level was .27 and .29 percent in the two tests given him after the incident.

Ex-contractor workers at INEL charged with defrauding scheme

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Five former employees and consultants of contractors at the INEL's Naval Reactors Facility have been charged with a scheme to defraud Westinghouse Electric Corp. and the government.

Three of the men named in the 56-count federal grand jury indictment returned Feb. 12 and unsealed Friday in Boise were Westinghouse employees at the Navy's top-secret Idaho National Engineering Laboratory installation.

The indictment names Daniel R. McNair of Blackfoot, 37; Rex McNair, 58, of Moreland; Keith L. Nelson, 48, of Idaho Falls; Paul M. Anderson, 42, of Pocatello; Craig A. Broadhead, 39, of St. George, Utah.

Rex McNair pleaded innocent Friday in an appearance before U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams in Boise. Nelson is scheduled to be arraigned Monday in Pocatello and Daniel McNair, Anderson and Broadhead on Wednesday in Boise. All remained free on their own recognizance Friday.

The men face charges of wire fraud, interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money or property, conspiracy, money laundering, and violating the federal Anti-Kickback Act between March and December 1990. Assistant U.S. Attorney George Breitsmeyer said an investigation began two years ago.

The indictment alleges that "straw" or "shell" companies and fraudulent documents were used to arrange the sale of 655 remediation kits for solidifying hazardous, non-radioactive waste at the Naval Reactors Facility, as well as to cover up the defendants' interests in the transaction and launder the money.

More than $450,000 was paid for the kits Westinghouse bought from subcontractor Mastone Enterprises Inc., and about $230,000 of that allegedly was funneled back to the five men through Nelmac Corp. and Intermountain Environmental Engineering and Science Corp., according to the indictment.

Rex McNair was co-owner of Nelmac, which put the kits together. Nelmac sold its kits to Intermountain Environmental Engineering and Science in Idaho Falls, which in turn sold the kits to Mastone, based in Salt Lake City.

Mastone then got a contract with Westinghouse to solidify hazardous wastes at the Naval Reactors Facility using the kits prepared by Nelmac.

McNair was fired in January 1992 from his job of 33 years at the INEL site over conflict-of-interest allegations. Westinghouse said the tool designer at the Navy installation's Expeditionary Core Facility failed to disclose business interests that might do work with Westinghouse.

But McNair said he never had a contract with Mastone and had no idea the kits would be used at the INEL.

Charges and penalties outlined in the indictment include:

- Daniel R. McNair, former Westinghouse employee and manager of environmental remediation at the Naval Reactors Facility, four counts of wire fraud, three counts of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money, one count of conspiracy, five counts of money laundering, and five counts of violating the Anti-Kickback Act. He faces up to 220 years in prison and $6 million in fines if convicted.

- Keith L. Nelson, former Westinghouse employee and material shipment coordinator at the Naval Reactors Facility, four counts of wire fraud, three counts of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money, one count of conspiracy, five counts of money laundering, and five counts of violating the Anti-Kickback Act. He faces up to 220 years in prison and $6 million in fines if convicted.

- Rex McNair, former Westinghouse employee and Naval Reactors Facility administrator, four counts of wire fraud, three counts of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money, one count of conspiracy, four counts of money laundering, and four counts of violating the Anti-Kickback Act. He faces up to 190 years in prison and $5.25 million in fines if convicted.

- Paul M. Anderson, president of Mastone Enterprises, four counts of wire fraud, three counts of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained money, one count of conspiracy, 12 counts of money laundering, and three counts of violating the Anti-Kickback Act. He faces up to 350 years in prison and $6 million in fines if convicted.

nauseous when they have a racist thought," another reviewer wrote in Essence magazine. "But any person with the courage to read 'Negrophobia' from cover to cover will have to reckon with the forces that teach white people to hate black people, and black people to hate themselves."

In James' book, a spoiled white teen-ager living on New York's Upper West Side snoops into her black maid's voodoo books and tries to strike a spell. But the maid, discovering the young woman has "familiar" with her books, casts a counter-spell, bringing forth all the white teen's secret fears of blacks.

James described the book Friday as "one long unrelenting racist hallucination." But his objective, he added, is not to perpetuate stereotypes, but to reclaim them.

"Why shouldn't black people take back the images that have hurt them and redefine them?" he asked. "Why should racist imagery be in the hands of the racists?"

James said he believes the races will ultimately live in complete harmony, but that it probably won't happen during his lifetime or even that of his grandchildren or great-grandchildren.

Nevertheless, he expressed hopes his writing might spur people of all colors to examine their own views on race relations.

"I want readers to absorb and digest the imagery and be put into the position of dealing with it on their own terms," he said.

"Negrophobia" will soon be published in paperback by St. Martin's Press. St. Martin's will also release James' second book, a look at what he called the exploitation of black popular culture.

James' CSI appearance was sponsored by Idaho State University's Special Delivery Productions as part of Black History Month.

Wendell

Reading a letter from the Idaho Department of Education, Slade said school districts in Idaho are obligated by law to provide all students, including those in kindergarten, with transportation to and from school. If not, the letter stated, districts are required to pay parents or guardians to provide the transportation, or to pay for care of the children until they can ride on the normal bus routes.

Slade emphasized that he does not want any money or child care, and he is not making any demands.

"I just want the board to be aware of the situation," he said, adding, "Wendell has a very good bus program and they really try to accommodate everyone."

Trustees agreed to study the matter. In their business:

• Lynn Beck, general contractor for the new high school, said work began this week to install underground utilities for the new building. Water and sewer lines were staked out, he said, and excavation equipment arrived at the site to begin work.

"I didn't seem like there was a lot of frost in the ground," Beck said.

Two of the three groups of bids for work and materials have been opened now, he said, and so far, the total is some $212,000 more than original estimates.

Two of the lowest bids that were much higher than expected were for carpeting and for finished carpentry work. Beck said he will go back to the architect, make changes on the bid orders and then call for new bids on the altered plans. On a postscript note, he said, several bids have come in much lower than expected.

The third group of bids, to be opened in March, are for later supplies and installations, including lockers, landscaping, stage curtains and auditorium seats.

After an executive session, the trustees voted to renew the contracts of elementary Principal Karen Osman and junior/senior high school Principal David Parton. Both principals are in their first year at Wendell and both were given another one-year contract.

Prisoners

The system stayed at or below 95 percent of capacity for 28 days.

The program would expire on June 30, 1994.

The problem, Vernon said, is that the prison system is already at 99 percent of capacity. Except for a few beds in the mental-health and segregation units, he said, the prisons are full.

Not only that, but 276 inmates who should be in state prisons are in federal custody. Except for a few beds in the mental-health and segregation units, he said, the prisons are full.

The severe overcrowding leaves Idaho's prison system ripe for a lawsuit and takeover by a federal master. Darrington warned.

But several victims-rights advocates and law-enforcement officials, including Attorney General Larry Echohawk, warned that an early-release program would be at best a quick fix and at worst a threat to public safety and a breach of the state's "truth-in-sentencing" law.

"I don't trust the system," said Valynn Mathie of Boise, a founder of the Family and Friends of Homicide Victims support group. "I don't believe it's an easy answer."

Releasing prisoners even a few months before their normal parole date breaks faith with crime victims and their families, Mathie said. Now, when a prisoner is sentenced to five years, she said, "at least we know we'll be safe for those five years."

Blaine County Sheriff Walt Fleming said the state prison system needs a master plan for keeping overcrowding under control. Such a plan would balance building new prisons and alternatives to prison like electronic monitoring, Fleming said.

"You cannot build your way out of this problem," he reminded the committee.

That didn't keep several witnesses, including Echohawk, from chastising the Legislature for not funding new prison construction.

If an prisoner released early kills or rapes someone, the attorney general asked, "how do we explain to people that, sorry, but we just didn't have enough room to put these people where they ought to have been?"

The measure wouldn't solve the overcrowding problem, Echohawk said, but merely put off a solution for another year.

Darrington said he personally supported building a "huge new prison," but admitted that that wouldn't ease the current overcrowding problem.

And, asked where he would get the money to build a new prison, Darrington said, "I don't have a clue."

The committee will vote Monday on whether to forward the bill to the full Senate.

like Newcomb's bill, and Monsanto Co. spokesman Trent Clark said similar bills are pending in the legislatures of every other state in the nation.

The Legislature overwhelmingly passed takings bills in 1991 and 1992, but Gov. Cecil Andrus vetoed both of them. Andrus said that the measures were too vague and would cost agencies too much time and money to implement.

Newcomb said the current version of the bill addresses those concerns by rewriting some sections and adding exceptions for emergency situations and actions that "categorically and by their nature" don't raise takings concerns.

The measure would require state agencies to assess the likelihood that a new regulation would be found to be a taking in court, estimate how much compensation might cost, and suggest alternatives.

Environmentalists, including the Idaho Conservation League and the Audubon Society, said Thursday that the bill would be so cumbersome in operation that it effectively would bring regulation — particularly environmental and public health regulation — to a grinding halt.

But Pete Skamser, head of the Idaho branch of the National Federation of Independent Business, said the burden should be on regulators to justify their rules, not on the people being regulated.

Besides, he said, the bill would spur agencies to be more creative and less heavy-handed in the way they regulate.

"It is not going to be long before there are going to be many more carefully thought out regulations coming forth," he said.

As an example, Clark — until recently head of the Idaho office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service — cited a U.S. Department of Agriculture rule in the mid-'80s banning all sales of poultry eggs in areas where avian influenza was common.

A producer of turkey eggs won a takings lawsuit against the USDA, he said, because his eggs were worth so much that he could afford to have them tested individually for the flu virus.

If the department had had to do a "mass" testing, Clark said, it likely would have come up with a more flexible rule and avoided the suit.

The bill now goes to the full House, which probably will vote on it sometime next week.

Teen-ager proves that at heart, everyone possesses goodness

Going into our church league basketball game last week, Adam was a marked man. I knew it, and my teen-age players knew it. For us to win, we had to stop him. And that wasn't going to be easy, since he is 6 inches taller than anyone on our team. He's also a great jumper, an excellent shooter, a fine ball-handler and an outstanding defensive player.

Oh, and they tell me he makes a mean batch of popcorn to sell at half time, too.

"He's the best," my awe-struck son, Joe, said after watching Adam dunk his way through warm-ups. "We have some good players, but nobody like Adam."

But we had a pretty good team, and in our pre-game huddle, we stressed the importance of working together — as a team — to contain Adam. If we did, we had a chance. If we didn't... well, it was going to be a long night for all of us.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

Adam easily controlled the opening tip, and his team sprinted down the court. With a couple of quick passes, they had the ball back in his hands just a few feet from the basket for what should have been an easy shot. But he didn't even look at the hoop. Instead, he passed to a smaller, younger player, who took an ill-advised outside shot that missed badly.

"Nice try!" Adam shouted to his teammate as they ran upcourt. "Get it next time!"

A few minutes later, Adam again spotted his younger, smaller teammate unguarded while three or four members of our team swarmed around him and the ball. He flipped the ball to the other player, who confidently drilled a 15-footer.

"Great shot!" Adam shouted, smiling, as the two slapped hands. "Keep it up!"

The first three quarters of the game followed pretty much that same pattern. While Adam made a few shots, most of the time, he concentrated on distributing the ball to his teammates, shouting encouragement and praise all the while. He also encouraged and praised our players, although he often did it after taking a rebound away from them or blocking a shot. If anyone from either team was knocked to the ground, Adam was the first one there to extend a hand and a smile.

As the two teams prepared to begin the fourth quarter, the outcome of the game was still very much in doubt. Adam's team was ahead, but only slightly. My boys felt good about their chances and returned to the floor with determination and enthusiasm. As I walked back to the bench, however, I noticed the scorekeepers smiling knowingly.

"What's going on?" I asked, wanting to be included in the joke.

"They looked at each other and started to chuckle."

"Just watch," one of them said. "You'll see."

What I saw was an absolutely devastating display of individual athletic craftsmanship. In less than three minutes, Adam single-handedly turned a close game into a blow-out. He dunked and hit the paint. He blocked shots and rebounded. He stole our passes and tossed the ball to his teammates for lay-ups. It was quick, it was painless and it was over.

After the game, I must have looked a little shell-shocked, because one of those smiling scorekeepers came over and put an arm around me.

"Don't worry about it," he said.

"Adam does that all the time. He doesn't turn it on until the fourth quarter, and then only long enough to put the game out of reach."

But why? Don't get me wrong — my team and I appreciated not having to endure four full quarters of being humiliated by Adam. But let's be honest: You don't normally associate such grace and good sportsmanship with teen-age boys, you know what I mean?

So I asked Adam about it when I bumped into him at the store a few days later. He gave me that same look. "Well, it's obvious!" I looked for my own teen-agers whenever I sell them a little short in the maturity department.

"Hey," he said, "it's a game. It's supposed to be fun. For everyone." He's right, of course. But sometimes it's hard to remember the recreational roots of athletics when our sports pages are filled with hard-nosed business negotiations — and crime reports or when you watch a game on TV and see sports heroes "talking trash," taunting each other and looking for any opportunity to make an opponent look bad.

That's why it's good to know that there are still a few athletes out there like Adam who are blessed with great skills as well as with great understanding and self-control. Good sportsmanship is what sets them apart from other gifted athletes and makes them marked men and women.

Feminism and the church

It's a story of transition

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Time magazine calls it today's "most vexing topic for Christianity." The issue: feminism and the church.

"The times they are a changing," crooned Bob Dylan. He wasn't talking about women in the parish, but it fits. Even in small town, USA.

Echoing social movements of the times, the big push to make women equal at church began with feminists of the '60s. But by 1956, Methodists and Presbyterians had already voted yes to women clergy.

In the Magic Valley, and across the country, the role of women in the church is a story of transition. It's not always a story with a happy ending.

"For a long time, women (ministers) were placed only on the mission field or in administrative positions," said the Rev. Anne Weld-Martin, pastor of the First United Methodist Church and the sole clergywoman in Twin Falls. Still today, female pastors are often employed by smaller parishes or in associate positions.

"Having grown up with male pastors, I have even had to battle my own preconceptions," Weld-Martin said. "My first day on the job as a pastor, I found myself walking in the door of the men's rest room at church."

These days, when women are appointed to churches, Weld-Martin explained, the congregations will generally gulp and say, "All right, we've got a woman, now let's see what we can do." She added, "Eventually, they find they can actually live very nicely and there is not much difference."

But a lot of churches haven't had to try.

Conflict and controversy

A sprinkling of women fill church pulpits in the 15-member Southern Baptist Convention, amid conflict and controversy.

Last month, the Oklahoma Baptist General Convention's State Evangelism Conference decided to cancel the speaking engagement of Billy Graham's daughter, Anne Graham. According to the Baptist Press, some Oklahoma Baptists worried that Lotz might be in a "potential preaching situation."

"The way many Baptists look at this issue, the Bible prohibits women from teaching or having authority over men — even at evangelism conferences."

The Catholic church has no women priests, even though Time magazine (Nov. 23, 1992) reports that a "solid majority of American Catholics now favor the idea. The Rev. Rob Keller of Twin Falls' St. Edward's Catholic Church doesn't expect the current situation to change."

"When the pope visited the states a few years ago, he was asked about this, and he was rather vague," said

The Rev. Anne Weld-Martin is Twin Falls' only clergywoman. She is pastor of First United Methodist Church.

Keller, who noted that a shortage of priests has led to deacons shouldering administrative duties in the church. Deacons are also male.

And yet, since the Second Vatican Council in the early 1960s, women have been involved in a wider variety of church roles. Not only are they Sunday and parish school teachers, but they also serve on parish councils, as electors (proclaiming scripture at Mass) and as Eucharistic ministers (administering the sacraments).

"And, according to Time magazine, today's Catholics seldom refer to church patriarch Thomas Aquinas' contention that males enjoy 'more perfect reason' and 'stronger virtue.'"

The Rev. M.L. Glatz, pastor of Grace Baptist Church in Twin Falls, said his denomination, the General Association of Regular Baptists, has undergone some changes through the years, too.

"Our church would like mothers to be home with the children," he explained. "But we know, in this society, that's just not practical."

The church does not allow women to be pastors or to serve on the church's governing board.

"In II Timothy, Chapter 3, men are recognized as pastors and church leaders," Glatz said.

Women's roles

Women at Grace Baptist are allowed to teach Sunday School, minister to shut-ins and lecture at special seminars. They may also teach in the church's parochial school.

"Ladies make excellent principals, especially in the elementary grades, because women are a little more sensitive and understanding," Glatz said.

He doesn't see any of the church's major policies about women changing anytime soon.

"The women-pastor issue just doesn't come up much," he said.

The Church of Jesus, Christ of Latter-day Saints doesn't admit women to the priesthood either, and Mormons have often been pegged as a people who relegate women to a minor role in the fold.

"We have taken flak from people outside the church for years," said Twin Falls State President Mome Carlson. "But the Book of Mormon indicates that women are equal in the eyes of the Lord."

St. Paul did support women

By George W. Cornell
The Associated Press

That impassioned New Testament letter writer, Paul, often gets blamed by feminists these days for subordination of women. He's sometimes glibly denounced as a woman hater. But scholars consider it a bump rap.

They say that contrary to such popular images, Paul was a sensitive, affectionate man who recognized women's equal worth, whose views were ahead of his times; who worked closely with women and regularly extolled them.

"In his own time, he was quite progressive about women," says the Rev. David Adams of Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., an Episcopal institution.

"He was very radical on their equality," Adams added in a telephone interview. "To dismiss him as a misogynist (hater of women) is just not so. He was not that at all."

Nevertheless, misinformed impressions of teachings considered by many scholars as mistakenly attributed to Paul sometimes get so warped that abusive husbands use them to justify wife-beating.

Claiming the Bible says wives are to be submissive, "they take the biblical text and distort it to support their right to batter," said U.S. Catholic bishops in condemning such domestic abuse of women. "A correct reading of Scripture leads people to a relationship based on mutuality and love."

Actually, the passage cited by the bishops as misused, Ephesians 5:21-33, apparently is not even Paul's. Scholars say that Ephesians and Timothy, although purporting to be Paul's letters, have a distinctly different style and vocabulary than the huge corpus of authentic Pauline letters.

"Most scholars would say that the material is not from Paul himself," said Adams, a New Testament professor.

Yet even assuming that somehow it might be Paul's, while the passage does say for wives to be "subject to your husbands" and "the husband is the head of the wife," the passage also makes counterbalancing points such as:

"Be subject to one another out of reverence for Christ... Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her... husbands should love their wives as their own bodies."

"He who loves his wife loves himself... No man ever hates his own flesh, but nourishes and cherishes it... For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh."

That, even though not Paul, could hardly by any stretch of falsifying be taken as an endorsement of domestic abuse.

"Anybody that believes that is grossly misrepresenting Paul," Adams

Evangelical Free Church shows film

JEROME — The Magic Valley Evangelical Free Church has planned a showing of the motion picture, "Moody!" The film will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday at the church, 901 E. Ave. H.

"Moody!" is a dramatic motion picture produced by Quadrus. It is the story of 19th century evangelist and reformer D.L. Moody, an ordinary man who changed the course of thousands of lives because of his extraordinary faith in the power of God.

Agape luncheon set for 1 p.m. Tuesday

GOODING — The Agape interfaith Luncheon is set for 1:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Lincoln Inn.

The theme, "Can You Juggle?" will be presented by Carolyn Bradley, and Nancy Adams will provide music. Cost is $4 per person. The program begins at 12:15 p.m. and is free to those not wanting lunch. The public is invited. For nursery care, call 934-4003.

Churches take part in world prayer day

World Day of Prayer observances are scheduled during March. The Twin Falls First Presbyterian Church has planned a celebration for noon Friday in the Fireside Room, and a service is also set for Friday at the First Christian Church in Buft. The Castleford United Methodist Women have planned an observance for March 17 at the home of Martha Bowers. World Day of Prayer is an annual event that unites Protestants, Roman Catholics, Orthodox and other Christians in 170 countries throughout the world.

Mennonites plan weekend discussions

FILER — The Filer Mennonite Church, 109 Fifth St., has planned a series of weekend sessions with futurist Tom Sine, author of "Wild Hope" and "The Mustard Seed Conspiracy."

Sine will speak on "Anticipating Tomorrow's Challenges" at 7 p.m. Friday, "Discerning God's Vision" at 7 p.m. March 6 and "Putting First Things First" at 10 a.m. March 7.

Sine holds a Ph.D. in American intellectual history with a minor in the study of the future from the University of Washington.

Catholic Women offer Lenten lunch

JEROME — The Catholic Women have planned Lenten luncheons for each Friday during the Lent season.

Luncheons are set for 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. this Friday through April 2 at St. Jerome's Parish Hall. Cost is $3 per person.

The women's group has planned a Lasagna Dinner and Fun Night for 5 to 8:30 p.m. March 13 at the parish hall. Freewill donations will be taken.

Southern Deaneys reps meet at St. Ed's

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Parish will host a meeting for the 17 representatives of the Southern Deaneys of the Idaho Council of Catholic Women on March 6.

A continental breakfast will be served at 8:30 a.m., with the meeting to follow. Mass will be celebrated at 11:30 a.m. and will be followed by a luncheon at the Turf Club. The ICCW Deaneys president, Kathleen Hayden of St. Edward's, will preside at the meeting. Registration fee is $8. Members can call 734-2837, 734-2201 or 734-4655 to register.

1st communion parents meet March 7

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Parish has planned a mandatory meeting for all parents of First Communion children for 7 to 9 p.m. March 7 at the parish hall. The meeting will announce plans for bringing the children to the Sacrament of Holy Eucharist. Family study materials will be handed out, and the role of the family in this process will be explained.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Out Of The Tombs... Mark 5:1-20

It's a controversial new video from the American Bible Society that uses a rock beat, and an MTV style of photography to depict Jesus exorcising demons from a man.

See it tonight on KKVI... and also hear the reaction of several Twin Falls area clergymen... some like it, many don't.

Trust God, don't throw him away

"How true it is that we live in a throwaway culture! Recently, I bought a new coat and expensive robe, thinking 'it would last awhile. Now it won't heat, and the repairman tells me that it will cost more to fix than it will to buy a new one. His advice? Discard it!"

The real problem starts when that same value is applied to people and relationships. Marriages, too, are often discarded rather than repaired when difficulties arise. We hear experts talk about "throwaway children" — children of former marriages who are now regarded as an inconvenience or a hindrance in their parents' new relationships. Children who are resented, abused or simply evicted with no place to go but the streets.

Then we have street people — society's throwaways — many of whom are mentally ill. Twenty years ago, the outcry arose against "warehousing" them in state mental institutions. The solution, mostly, has been to release them, unhealed and unskilled, to pick a living as best they can from city streets and refuse bins. Cheaper for the state in terms of mental health care? You bet!

tionships, people. In the midst of this, we hear Christ's voice reminding us that life is neither the situation comedy nor the mindless violence that we see on TV. Relationships are not resolved in an hour with commercials. They take a lifetime. We hear Christ's voice telling us that the high point of living is not personal pleasure nor even personal fulfillment but love and service to others.

This is a hard message for us to hear as Christians, marinated as we are in a culture that screams against it. Mother Theresa remarked one time that to be a Christian is much harder in America than in India! Christianity is counter-culture here, too, but the war is fought on a much more subtle and hit-persuasive level. "We have met the enemy, and he is us," as Pogo used to say.

The good news in all of this is that we don't have to settle for less — less joy, less love, less compassion, less wonder. We don't have to be afraid of the dark; nor of our fellow human beings; nor of death itself. We know that we can trust the God who loves us and calls us to be followers of his way. God keeps us and will not throw us away — in life, in death, in life beyond death. Instead, God calls us to save and repair and heal our broken brothers and sisters in the midst of this throwaway culture.

The Rev. Anne Weld-Martin is co-pastor with her husband, Wayne, at the First United Methodist Church in Twin Falls. She was raised in California, lived in Europe and graduated from high school in Japan. She lived in Alaska for nine years. Weld-Martin spent time as a musician, elementary school teacher and federal programs administrator before entering the ministry. She pastored churches in Salem, Ore., and Anchorage, Alaska, before coming to Twin Falls.

Church

In fact, the Mormon Church is undergoing some changes these days, according to Carlson, who said 1,135 churches like most religious bodies are partly a product of male-dominated society.

"The biggest recent doctrinal change, Carlson explained, was the admission of black males to the priesthood nearly two decades ago. "I believe our scriptures indicate that blacks should hold the priesthood," said Carlson, pointing out a passage in Second Nephi in which the Lord invites all to come unto him, including "black and white." The invitation is also extended to both "male and female."

"I doubt I'll ever see the Mormon Church allowing women into the priesthood, but I wouldn't rock me to the core," Carlson said. "There is definitely some movement."

Mission presidents' wives used to hold minor roles, Carlson explained. "But, in 1983, as mission president in Taiwan, I was told to rely on my wife in a sort of joint administration," he said, adding, "Wives have always had tremendous input behind the scenes."

The Mormon Church is also starting to develop programs for singles, and several LDS bishops are divorced and remarried.

Just last month, Mormon historian D. Michael Quinn, quoted in an Associated Press story, said the church's founder Joseph Smith actually taught that women receive the priesthood as part of a sacred temple rite. The doctrine, Quinn explained, is virtually unknown to the modern church.

Fundamental issues

It's an "explosive issue," according to Quinn, who recently completed a book entitled "Women and Authority: Re-emerging Mormon Feminism." Carlson put it in joint administration. "We approach women is changing, and our book of doctrine and covenants is not closed."

Though the Assembly of God Church has been ordaining women since its inception, only 15 percent of its ministers are female, and decisions about allowing women to sit on church boards are left up to local congregations.

"Some churches do not allow women to sit on the deacon board," said the Rev. Ted Britain, pastor at First Assembly of God, which is affiliated with the largest Pentecostal denomination in the world. The Twin Falls congregation has no rule against seating women on its board, though none hold positions at this time.

Britain teaches that the man should be the head of the home. He contends that someone has to have final authority and that "anything with two heads is a freak." But he defines headship as responsibility, not dictatorship. "A man must love his wife and meet her needs," said Britain, referring to the apostle Paul's writings on marriage.

The Rev. Brian Thom of Twin Falls has become familiar with many schools of thought about women in his role as Episcopal priest. Though the Episcopal Church in the United States has been ordaining women priests since 1976, Episcopalians range from ultra-conservative to the very liberal.

"One of our bishops even says Paul not only put women down but was, himself, a homosexual with a kept man," Thom said. "He's on the far edge of the left."

Thom disputes the idea that sin is a woman's fault (thanks to Eve) by citing scriptures that blame both man and woman for the Genesis fall. God called men to be disciples, he explained, because, in Jesus' culture, women couldn't have shared that role.

"Jesus represented the disenfranchised, someone who was not a warrior but a person of love," Thom said. "Some say if God were sending Jesus now, he would have to send a woman."

The primary issue of women in the church is about male sexism, noted Thom, contending that "sexism is sin because it causes separation from God and prevents people from being who they fully are."

Philosophical conflict

Women and church is also an issue of conservative vs. feminist, though points-of-agreement do exist. For example, most people agree that Jesus bestowed unusual dignity on women, and they know that women served in leadership positions in the New Testament church. But some groups hold widely divergent opinions on other matters.

One such group has formed the "Women-Church" worship group, blending in New Age and a variety of other religious and secular elements. And one book offers liturgies to celebrate the coming-out of lesbians.

"Many who label themselves militant feminists are no longer in the church," said the Rev. Debbie Pitney, district superintendent overseeing 42 United Methodist congregations in Idaho. "These people don't have time for the patriarchal and hierarchical systems of the church."

Less militant feminists remain inside the hallowed walls, working to make their voices heard, according to Pitney. One result: the New Revised Standard Version of the Bibles includes words like "people" and "humankind" replace "man" and "mankind" language, for humanity, though it retains male terms for God. Taking the idea one step further, the United Church of Christ printed the following version of Matthew 28:19 in "The Gospels and the Letters of Paul" (1992): "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of God the Father and Mother and of Jesus Christ the beloved Child, and of the Holy Spirit."

Time calls all of this The Second Reformation. Reformation — as in change.

Robertson urges 'cultural war'

By Gustav Niebuhr
The Washington Post

Robertson

LOS ANGELES — Veteran television evangelist Pat Robertson told Christian radio and television broadcasters last week that they have a "holy, divine mandate" to rally their audiences for spiritual battle in the "cultural war" for America's soul. Singling out The Washington Post for special criticism, he said evangelical Christians will not get "a fair break" from the secular media, which also is not reporting on what he called America's moral decline. He said a sentence in a Post news story Feb. 1 — stating that followers of Robertson and the Rev. Jerry Falwell "are largely poor, uneducated and easy to command" — proved the newspaper's bias. The Washington Post ran a correction of the sentence the day after it was published, saying there is no factual basis for that statement.

"We are living, my friends, in a hostile land ... and the truth is, we are fighting a cultural war and we are fighting for the survival of America," said Robertson, founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network and the main speaker at the 50th anniversary banquet of the National Religious Broadcasters, held in a downtown hotel here. His audience, several hundred largely evangelical Christian broadcasters from across the country, responded with repeated applause and a standing ovation. Robertson's remarks capped an annual religious broadcasters convention marked by an undercurrent of political pessimism, in sharp contrast with past gatherings. Recent broadcasters' conventions, which were held in Washington from 1967 to 1992, provided a friendly forum for conservative Republican officials; during their terms in office, Presidents Reagan and Bush spoke to the group.

But President Clinton's administration has been coolly received. The organization's magazine, Religious Broadcasting, features commentary this month by seven of its members, some warning of a coming national "darkness," marked by new abortion-rights laws, a rise in homosexual political activism and the appointment of judges "hostile to traditional family morality."

In an interview, the Rev. Richard Lee, an Atlanta minister and host of the weekly "There's Hope" television program, said broadcasters feel "a great deal of alarm at Mr. Clinton's positions," especially his push to allow homosexuals in the military. "If the man would do things that follow biblical principles and precepts, we'd support him," Lee said. One radio broadcaster, Richard P. Bott, president of the Kansas City, Mo.-based Bott Broadcasting Co., accused Clinton of "hypocrisy" for speaking of his personal faith as an evangelical (Clinton is a Southern Baptist) but not following conservative Christian positions on political issues. "It's been years since we've seen a president with so much praying and Scripture-quoting and hymn-singing, followed by the antithesis of that," Bott said.

In his speech, Robertson said the United States was mired in moral corruption, its schools plagued with violence and millions of people racked by sexual disease, drug abuse and divorce. "We have a holy, divine mandate to address these problems," he told the broadcasters. He offered a solution partly political and partly spiritual. Robertson, founder of the Christian Coalition, a national organization that trains religious conservatives in political action, said religious Americans have enough strength in numbers to elect politicians to "any office." He also said the broadcasters ought to ask their audiences to join in sustained, "united prayer ... and we can cry out to God for a mighty spiritual awakening in this nation."

said. Instead, he said the passage invites a "reciprocity between men and women."

In Paul's authentic letters, which include some of the most moving, tender passages about love, he unfurls in Galatians 3:28 this ringing standard of human equality, sexual and otherwise: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus."

Adams said that this passage and other writings of Paul "indicate he takes a very radical stance on the place of women. By virtue of their baptism, they have a new standing of equality."

"One of his fundamental feelings is that everyone stands before God in the same relation, regardless of race or gender, that all are sinful, but have the same big chance at salvation. It's the big one. In that sense everyone is equal. There is really no distinction."

Hottest 'healer' hits town

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — The billboard was all over town: Come For Your Miracle. And come they did. And the true believers believe they got their miracle. Folks in wheelchairs got up and walked. A woman with a lump in her breast said it was gone. A man stricken with cancer jogged on the stage.

"Thank you, Jesus!" people moaned and chanted earlier this month as miracle after miracle was announced to the cheers and tears of 17,000 witnesses.

Thank you, Benny Hinn. Pastor Benny Hinn swept into the Civic Center in Philadelphia for a two-day "This Is Your Day Miracle Crusade." The controversial TV evangelist from Orlando, Fla., is the hottest charismatic faith healer on the circuit today. His followers say the ordained Pentecostal minister has the power to summon the healing powers of the Holy Spirit. He does not perform miracles. People's faith make the miracles happen.

"Benny does not heal," says his brother, Christopher Hinn. "Benny is an instrument used by God. He's a human being. But God uses him. That's his ministry."

But critics say that the miracles lack medical proof and are nothing but chicanery.

Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited banquet set

TWIN FALLS — The second annual Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited banquet for Magic Valley will be held March 18 at the Turf Club in Twin Falls. Tickets may be obtained by writing ISSU committee 93 at Box 2261, Twin Falls, 83303-2261 or by calling Tim Crist at 734-4234 or Rob Pearson at 733-0185.

A no-host cocktail hour begins at 6 p.m., and diners will have their choice of Pacific salmon or prime rib. Cost is $35 which includes ISSU membership and the meal.

The evening will include auction of art and outdoor equipment.

All proceeds will be used to perpetuate andronous fish runs into Idaho.

Packers bid farewell to touted offensive lineman Mandarich

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Tony Mandarich's disappointing career with the Green Bay Packers ended Friday when the team announced it would not offer a contract to the offensive tackle, its first-round draft pick in 1992.

The move makes Mandarich an unrestricted free agent.

Mandarich, who did not play last season because of injury and illness, was in the final year of a four-year, $4.4 million contract in 1992.

He was the second player taken overall in the 1989 draft after an All-American senior season at Michigan State.

But Mandarich never became the player the Packers thought he would after holding out and missing all of training camp before his rookie season.

Lewis-Tucker bout runs into trouble, Bowe manager says

LONDON — WBC heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis' scheduled fight against Tony Tucker in Las Vegas on May 8 is in danger of being called off, according to the manager of WBA and IBF titlist Riddick Bowe.

Rock Newman said Friday he had "first-hand knowledge" that the bout was "in very serious jeopardy."

"They say it's signed, but it's far from being official," Newman said.

Newman's statement contradicts what American promoter Dan Duva said Monday, that Lewis had signed an official WBC championship bout contract for the fight.

BOISE — Twin Falls did Friday what it failed to do Thursday and advanced to the consolation championship of the Class A-1 state basketball tournament with a 64-51 win over Madison.

The Bruins' opponent, at 9:15 this morning, will be Skyline, a 49-47 victor over Coeur d'Alene on Paul Davis' short jumper with two seconds remaining.

Capital, which surprised top-ranked Lewiston, and Borah, a 38-36 overtime

A-1 State Tournament

winner over Highland, will clash in an all-Boise state championship finale this evening.

"Near the end of the third quarter, the Bruins ran off 10 unanswered points for a 52-39 lead that took Madison out of the contest."

"Our defense really did it," said Bruin senior Eddie Trenkle, who scored five of his 12 points during the run. "When we picked it up on defense, that made our offense a lot better."

Junior center John Krahn benefited from some crisp and attentive Bruin passing to make eight of 10 shots inside for 16 points. Rand Stover matched Trenkle's 12 points. J.J. Astorguia added 11.

A 3-pointer by Astorguia with 2:21 left in the third quarter started the Bruins on their run. Trenkle added a putback 28 seconds later. Krahn added a turnaround with 42 seconds left. Trenkle finished the spurt with a baseline drive for a three-point play in the last 10 seconds.

The Bruins pushed the lead as high as 17 points, 60-43, in the fourth quarter.

The worry after Twin Falls' shocking loss to Capital Thursday was the team's ability to bounce back from the disappointment.

"The whole year, we've been saying state championship," Trenkle said. "When we got beat yesterday, Coach (Ben Allen) challenged us to challenge ourselves. We decided we're going to win the consolation, so we picked it up about four notches."

The Bruins face the Skyline Grizzlies at 9:15 p.m. today at the Boise State University Pavilion for the consolation title.

Golden Eagles dominate Ricks

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Of the innumerable national junior college and collegiate records Fred Trenkle holds, a victory tonight may add to perhaps his most prestigious.

Trenkle and his 1992-93 College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles will be winding up the season by hosting the talented North Idaho Cardinals at 8 p.m. If CSI can win that one, the Golden Eagle basketball program will have its eighth consecutive 30-plus win season cinched.

Women lose — B8

The next closest is a three-year stretch University of Kentucky had under legendary Adolph Rupp from 1947 to 1949.

The Eagles set that up Friday night by bursting away from Ricks College in the second half for a 104-72 win that lengthened this year's mark to 29-1.

The big thing, however, was that it clinched the No. 1 seedling for the Region 18 (district 13) finals that open here Thursday.

A North Idaho win would leave the Eagles co-sharing the Scenic West title with Dixie.

"It is getting in this league that every game is a major battle," said Trenkle who probably is as responsible as anyone for the competitive growth in the region over the last 10 years. "This game is no exception. I consider North Idaho the equal of Dixie and Eastern Utah and I know they always play well here."

Trenkle added "it also would be nice if a standing-room only crowd would show up to tell these players they've had a great year."

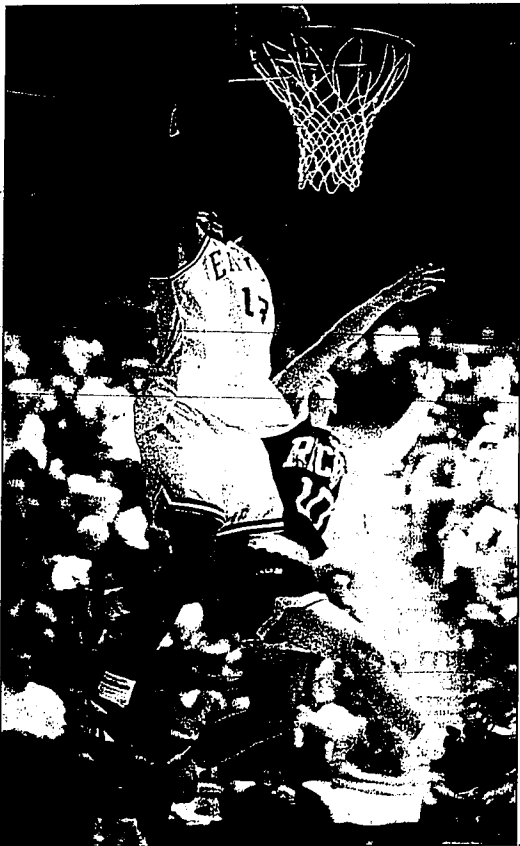

Ricks, playing CSI for the third time this season, stayed easily within contention through the first half. But early in the second period, CSI started moving away.

And then at the 10-minute mark it was over. CSI had jacked a 45-36 halftime lead to 71-50, Dave Isaacson getting a three-pointer for Ricks at that point. But the Vikings didn't score again until 4:50 remained in the game.

In the interim, CSI pushed through 22 points to make it 93-50 — and start the crowd clinking of Wendy burgers. But Matt Szende's field goal sparked a little Ricks counter blitz in which CSI was physcured 12-4 and that started the fans toward the door.

Ricks had stayed close by hitting five three-pointers in the first half against one for the Eagles. But CSI lead five slams to name for Ricks and top gun Clayton Johnson had 17 points. The Eagles had six more jams and some fun and crowd-pleasing offensive

Bobcats heat up against Kellogg

The Times-News

MERIDIAN — The Burley Bobcats staggered Kellogg with sizzling 86 percent shooting in the first quarter but it wasn't until the closing four minutes they could deliver the knockout punch that put them in the state Class A-2 consolation finale.

The Bobcats, with Bob Plotts and Chad Clark hitting over 20 points and Tom Ruffell adding 18, downed the Wildcats 87-74.

A-2 State Tournament

They will advance against the Vallivue Falcons in the consolation playoffs at 9:15 a.m. today at the Centennial High School gymnasium in Meridian.

Sugar-Salem's torried Diggers take on Bishop Kelly for the A-2 championship in the Boise State Pavilion this evening after, Priest River meets Bear Lake for third place.

Clark hit four three-point goals in the first quarter when Burley appeared capable of putting this one away early.

The Bobcats held a 30-15 lead at the first rest but things weren't that happy again.

Late in the second period, Matt Morgan, Kevin Regina and Jeremy Allen picked up points that chopped Burley's halftime lead to 46-42.

Kamiah crushes Trojans' hopes in post-season play

The Times-News
and the Associated Press

MERIDIAN — The bright hopes of a undefeated regular season and District 4 championship melted into disappointment Friday when the Wendell Trojans bowed out of the Idaho state Class A-3 basketball tournament.

The Trojans, out of synch offensively much of the time, fell to the Kamiah Kubs and University of Idaho-bound Jared Mercer 64-48 Friday afternoon. The victory sends Kamiah into today's 9:15 a.m. consolation finals against Pocatello while Wendell, which lost two straight here and three of its last four, ended its year at 23-3.

"It's a tough year to end a great year. I feel so sorry for our players," said Wendell Coach Allen Kelsey.

Mercer, a 5-10 guard, scored 35 points, and also helped the Kubs with his ball handling. He leaves the school as probably the top varsity point scorer in Idaho history, although no one can say that for sure because records aren't available.

Ryon Pope scored 14 points and Nate Kelsey added 13 to pace the Wendell scoring.

Earlier, junior forward Terry Haddock led four Loggers in double figures as Pocatello beat Fruitland 68-61 at Centennial High School in Meridian.

The other consolation game was close throughout. Pocatello led Fruitland only 15-14 after the first quarter and the game was tied 44-44 heading into the fourth. But the Loggers outscored the Grizzlies 24-17 during the stretch.

Fouls and free throws helped Pocatello. Fruitland committed 25 fouls to the

CALDWELL — Murtaugh left its offense at the motel Friday night, but the Red Devil defense was more than enough to win a spot in the Class A-3 state finals.

A-4 State Tournament

Holding Kendrick 0-17 from the field in the fourth quarter, the Red Devils defeated the Tigers 51-41.

Albertson College of Idaho.

Murtaugh gets a shot at two-time defending champion Wilder, a 70-46 winner over Troy at 1:30 p.m. today at the Boise State University Pavilion.

Kendrick and 1992 runner-up Troy tangle for third place at 1 p.m. today.

"We play such good defense throughout the game, when it comes to the fourth quarter a lot of teams are out of the game," said Murtaugh booster Craig Stanger. "They have to work hard against us on defense, and then they have to work hard on offense."

The Devils scored the last three points of the second quarter to take the lead for good. Murtaugh boosted its edge in the second quarter with trapping defense that led to a 23-24 effort by the Tigers.

"We noticed the day before they had a little trouble with the press," Stanger said. "They did make a good halftime adjustment, spread the floor a little bit, started knocking down the outside shots and forced us back to our bread and butter, man-to-man."

Kendrick reduced the Devils' 27-15 halftime lead to six points with 2:56 left in the third quarter by hitting five 3-point goals.

Kirby Nebecker led Murtaugh with 17 points. Justin Cummings and Bryan Brown added 10 each.

Wilder has not been tested in the second half in its first two tournament games.

"We're excited to be playing them. This team, its fans and coach have talked quite confidently and justifiably so," Stanger said. "I think we're a quiet team, what they've seen at the tournament, but we're going to give up some poundage and some size."

Celts end road skid; Blazers rip Nets

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Kevin Gamble scored 27 points and Sherman Douglas gave seven of his 17 in the final 2:17 as the Boston Celtics ended the Atlanta Hawks 110-99 Friday night.

Pro basketball

The victory was the second in a row for the Celtics, who snapped a four-game road losing streak.

Boston never trailed after Reggie Lewis broke a 78-78 tie with two free throws just over a minute into the final quarter. Lewis stretched the lead to 82-78 with two more free throws at the 9:20 mark, wrapping up a personal string of 11 consecutive points.

The Celtics stretched their lead to 94-83 with 4:43 remaining before Dominique Wilkins, who had 36 points for the Hawks, converted two three-point plays, helping Atlanta close to 98-94 with 2:38 to play. But the Hawks got no closer, with Douglas starting his late scoring spurt on a rebound basket with 2:17 left, the final end of a 6-0 Boston run.

Trail Blazers 102, Nets 91

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Clyde Drexler scored 10 of his 26 points in an early 21-4 spurt that lifted Portland over corner-plugged New Jersey.

Cliff Robinson added 20 points as the Trail Blazers won for the only time in 11 games. The loss left the Nets winless in three games after the All-Star break and also snapped a season-high six-game home winning streak.

New Jersey hit 39 of 99 shots from the field, including 7 of 24 in the first quarter. The Nets also had 23 turnovers, including 11 on the opening possession.

Portland, which had been outscored in the first quarter in 7 of its last 10 games, built a 31-14 lead in the opening 14 minutes of the 21-4 spurt.

Drexler and Robinson gave New Jersey a jump to tie the game at 10.

Derrick Coleman led the Nets with 17 points.

Heat 93, Spurs 86

MIAMI — Bimbo Coles scored six of his 18 points on free throws in the final 38 seconds, carrying Miami past San Antonio.

Grant Long led the Heat with 25 points and 17 rebounds, including 12 on the offensive end to tie a team record. The loss was the third straight and ended in five games for the Spurs, who won 18 of 19 before that. They were playing without All-Star forward Sam Elliott, out with a back strain, while All-Star David Robinson scored 17 points despite playing with his shooting hand taped because of a sprained thumb.

76ers 114, Bucks 111

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Hornacek's rebounding with 24 seconds left proved to be the winning points as Philadelphia snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating Milwaukee.

Horsey Hawkins had 26 points and

NBA players claim collusion by commissioner

DALLAS (AP) — The NBA Players Association has filed a collusion claim against league commissioner David Stern, blaming him for the Dallas Mavericks' failure to offer top pick Jim Jackson market value.

The claim, according to two club presidents, asserts that the Mavericks failed to offer Jackson market value because of a speech Stern made at a Board of Governors meeting in New York on Oct. 20, 2021. The Dallas Morning News reported in Saturday's editions:

Mavericks' general manager

Norm Sonju has stated publicly on several occasions that owner Donald Carter returned from those meetings determined to hold the line against long-term, guaranteed contracts.

"A claim has been filed against the commissioner," in the second circuit court of Newark, N.J., said Charles Grantham, the executive director of the players' union.

"We've agreed not to discuss it publicly, but it centers around the potential issue of collusion," Grantham said.

"This was triggered, or started by some degree, by reports in which Sonju suggested that Carter was reluctant to make a deal for Jackson after attending the owners meetings."

"We've been in contact with the Players Association on this matter and both sides have agreed not to discuss it further," said Brian McIntyre, the NBA's vice president of public relations.

The Mavericks initially offered Jackson a five-year, $13.75 million deal. Shortly after Carter returned from the Board of Governors meeting, the club lowered its offer to four years at $10.94 million.

The final offer was a four-year,

Borah bests Bruins in wrestling dual

The Times-News

BOISE — Glenn Bell and Geoff Pierce ended Friday with big victories, but a slow start doomed Twin Falls to a 38-22 non-conference wrestling loss at the hands of the Borah Lions Friday evening.

Ryan Larson won for Twin Falls at 103 pounds and Jaime Guerra added a decision for the Bruins at 119, but not until John Brooks claimed a 3-0 decision in the 145-pound classification would the team again taste victory.

Weather forces PGA to shorten L.A. Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The second round of the Los Angeles Open was rained out Friday and won't be made up, with tournament officials shortening the event to 54 holes.

None of the players teed off Friday, as overnight rains continued into the morning at Riviera Country Club. More rain was forecast for Saturday.

Jay Don Blake, looking for the second tour victory of his career, and Jim McGovern and Russ Beiersdorf, who have not won an event, shared the lead after the first round with 4-under-par 67s on Thursday.

Among those in close contention were defending champion Fred Couples, who shot an opening 71, and Phil Mickelson, earning off a victory at San Diego last weekend. Mickelson shot a first-round 70 at Riviera.

After missing the cut in four tournaments this year, Blake was revitalized by a return to San Diego, where he won in 1991.

"Going back to San Diego made me remember a lot of good thoughts. It put me in a grinding mode and gave me a positive attitude," Blake said after his opening round at Riviera Country Club created a three-way tie at the top.

"I was expecting a lot out of myself early in the year and put a lot of pressure on myself—I've hit it pretty solid all year long, but I just wasn't scoring."

Jim McGovern and Russ Beiersdorf, each looking for his first tour win, matched Blake's 67. After the opening 18 holes at Riviera, Jeff Sluman and Ronnie Black each were one shot off the pace, with defending champion Fred Couples, who also won the tournament in 1990, four strokes behind with a 71.

Couples is trying to become the first player to win consecutive L.A. Open titles since Arnold Palmer in 1966-67.

Phil Mickelson, last weekend's winner at San Diego, shot a first-round 70.

Tiger Woods, who last year at the LA Open became the youngest player ever in a PGA event, was merely the second lowest-scoring teen-ager in the first round this year.

Red Sox let Clark test the waters

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Jack Clark, a slugger who slumped on and off the field last year, was waived Friday by the Boston Red Sox one day after arriving at spring training.

He said he felt "revved" and grateful that the team cut him early enough to improve his chances to catch on elsewhere. General manager Lou Gorman said he expected Clark to be signed quickly.

A team that signs Clark after the clears waivers, as expected, next Wednesday only would have to pay him the $109,000 minimum. The Red Sox would have to pay the rest of his $2.4 million salary.

"Someone's going to give him a

even though the Red Sox were willing to pick up a substantial part of his paycheck.

Boston became Clark's fifth team when he agreed to an $8.7 million, three-year contract as a free agent on Dec. 13, 1990. He hit .249 with 38 job," Gorman said. "They've got nothing to lose."

He said some teams had expressed interest in trading for the first baseman-designated hitter but none agreed homers and 87 RBIs in 1991. But he slipped to .210 with five homers, both career lows, in 81 games last year when he was beset by physical and financial problems.

He filed for bankruptcy and lost all but one of his nearly 20 vehicles. He moved from a home in northern California to a rented condominium in the southern part of the state.

His baseball salary was being paid to an administrator to settle debts, Gorman said.

"They held on to me long enough that it accomplished a special thing in my life," Clark said.

He referred to the fact that his continued employment during the winter with the Red Sox helped with his money troubles, Gorman said. In a 17-year career with San Francisco, St. Louis, the New York Yankees, San Diego and Boston, Clark has 340 homers and a .267 average.

The presence of Carlos Quintana and Mo Vaughn at spring training and Ivan Calderon as designated hitter made Clark expendable.

"I'm not in a hurry. I don't have to rush and make a quick decision," Clark said. "This is kind of an opportunity to sit back and pick what might be the best place for me."

He said his release probably was inevitable.

Bowe checks out competition on England trip

LONDON (AP) — Heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe came to London Friday to get a close look at an undefeated British heavyweight who could be one of his next opponents... and his name isn't Lennox Lewis.

Bowe posed for the ritual head-to-head boxing photos with Herbie Hide, a little-known 21-year-old contender who is being lined up for a possible world title fight.

Bowe will be at ringside Saturday night when Hide fights for the vacant British heavyweight title against Michael Murray. "Herb's the word," Bowe said. "I haven't seen him fight so far, but I hear he's pretty good. I'm going to watch him very closely tomorrow night."

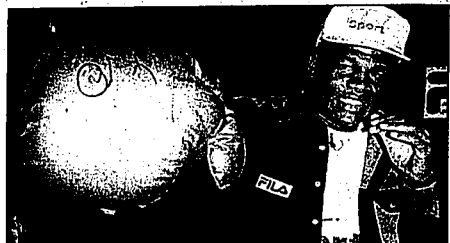

A Bowe-Hide contest, if it ever comes off, would be late this summer. Before that, Bowe's next fight is expected to be a rematch in June with Evander Holyfield, the man he defeated for the world title on Nov. 13.

Bowe's manager, Rock Newman, said he was close to finalizing a deal for a pay-per-view bout against Holyfield, probably in Las Vegas, Kenya is also a possible venue, he said. "It could be completed today, at the very latest by the end of next week."

One fighter who is not in Bowe's immediate plans is Lewis, recognized as the WBC heavyweight champion. Bowe, the WBA and IBF champion, was stripped of the WBC belt when he refused a mandatory first defense against Lewis.

Lewis, who is scheduled to fight Tony Tucker in Las Vegas on May 8, is making a promotional tour of Britain this week. He was not in London to defend himself against the barbs from Bowe's camp.

"I'll fight him anytime, anywhere," Bowe said as he arrived at Heathrow airport. "I am not hiding. He's the one playing games. I'm ready to get it on with him, but he's turned down every deal."

World heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe jokes around with oversized boxing glove Friday in London.

"It doesn't matter what some little fat guy in Mexico might say," said Jose Sulaiman. "Riddick Bowe is the heavyweight champion of the world."

Broncos sign Kragen as free agency nears

The Associated Press

With free agency three days away, NFL teams continued their efforts Friday to sign coveted players who could otherwise become free to sell themselves around the league.

The Denver Broncos, for example, reached agreement with nose tackle Greg Kragen on a two-year $2.3 million contract that includes a $300,000 signing bonus. And the Indianapolis Colts were close to re-signing two starters who could have become free, guard Randy Dixon and wide receiver Jessie Hester along with defensive end Skip McClendon.

The most liberal free agency will officially take effect on Monday, when about 350 players will be unrestricted free agents.

The way that was expected to be cleared officially on Friday when the plan went before Judge David Doty in Minneapolis.

Doty presided at the trial last summer at which jury threw out the league's limited free agent plan and cleared the way for the current agreement.

This class of free agents is headed by longtime All-Pro defensive end Reggie White of Philadelphia. Because he was a plaintiff in one of the lawsuits that led to free agency, it also includes a half-dozen or more quarterbacks who might help the chances of teams like the Kansas City Chiefs, who believe they're a quarterback away from a Super Bowl.

White was actually declared a "franchise player" by the Eagles, so that the team can receive a draft pick from a special pool if he goes elsewhere. The same pertains to Tim McDonald, Phoenix' Pro Bowl safety.

As for the Colts, general manager Jim Irsay said by the weekend we have been between three and six players done."

"We've tried to get them all signed, but obviously that's not going to happen," he said.

College clock squabble emerges again

The Associated Press

There were two classic examples this past week of a much-needed rule change in college basketball.

Both top-ranked Indiana's loss at Ohio State and Syracuse's final-second win at Villanova had those scenarios where on-court officials are forced to handle off-court duties as well by placing time back on the game clock when a team has called a timeout after an opponent has scored.

Everyone's been part of a screaming session where fans of the scoring team say the game is over because the buzzer has sounded and those for the team now faced with a desperate situation are begging for more time in increments of tenths of seconds.

This wouldn't happen in the NBA because the game clock stops in the final two minutes after a field goal. "The rules committee has talked about that situation the last couple of years and we have it on the current questionnaire," NCAA rules secretary Hank Nichols said Thursday. "So we'll have to wait and see what percentage answered what way. I'm sure it will be discussed again this year by the committee."

The officials are allowed to use television replays to determine how much time should be put back on the clock.

"They are allowed to use the TV if they think there's been a timer's error," Nichols said. "That means if they blow the whistle for the timeout but they feel the timer doesn't get the clock stopped on time. They can use it to see if a timer made an error or to see participants in a fight."

Hopefully the reasons can be cut in half next season.

Buzzer-beaters are a way of college basketball and every once in a while one can give the memory bank a jolt.

On Tuesday night Syracuse's Conrad McRae got a shot off just before the final horn to beat Villanova and the circumstances were eerily reminiscent of what many consider the best NCAA tournament game ever played.

Last season, Christian Laettner of Duke took a pass from Grant Hill on the opposite baseline, dribbled once and hit a turnaround jumper from just beyond the foul line to beat Kentucky and advance to the Final Four for the fifth straight season.

The Syracuse-Villanova game was just a regular-season Big East game but it was also played at the Spectrum in Philadelphia and Mike Hopkins of the Orangemen took the ball out of bounds on the same baseline as Hill did. He threw the ball just about the same distance only to the other side of the lane and McRae didn't dribble, but he did hit the turnaround jumper for the buzzer-beating win.

For those who keep close tabs on such things, Villanova coach Steve Lappas did have a man on the inbounder...

According to computer rankings, Temple was the second-toughest schedule in Division I behind only Michigan. John Chaney, the man who has successfully coached the Owls since 1982, has long been an advocate of tough schedules but he now adds a warning when discussing the situation.

"I wouldn't recommend scheduling the way we have for the last 11 years for young coaches because they would be fired," Chaney said. "I can get away with it because I'm an old guy and wins and losses don't matter because you can fire me and I'll just go to some happy farm someplace."

Three teams managed to go undefeated in conference play last season and with just a couple of weekends of regular-season play to go, five have a shot at a perfect league season this year.

In two of the conferences it's especially important because they don't have postseason tournaments to determine who gets the NCAA bid.

Arizona has already clinched the Pac 10 title and is tied in the final of 64 as the Wildcats are 13-0. They have Oregon at home Saturday and then head for the road with games at California and Stanford. They close the season at home with games against UCLA and Southern Cal.

Penn leads the Ivy League at 9-0 and the Quakers could almost seal things up with a pair of wins this weekend at Cornell and Columbia. After that, there are still home games with Yale and Brown before the season finale at Princeton.

The others looking to finish with a 10 on the right-hand side are Cleveland State of the Mid-Continent Conference which wraps it up on Saturday and Monday at Northern Illinois and Wisconsin-Green Bay; Coppin State of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference which closes out the regular season at home Saturday against Maryland-Eastern Shore; and New Orleans which finishes on the road Saturday and Monday against South Alabama and Arkansas State.

Talent-laden Vikings team drops Eagles, 78-58

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Ricks had the height, shooting eye and depth and that, of course, meant the game.

The Vikings, with Camille Woodbury roaming the middle for 30 points, never trailed and stayed a game off the scenic West Conference lead with a 78-58 victory over College of Southern Idaho.

CSI winds up its regular season by hosting North Idaho at 6 p.m. tonight. Then the top eight women's team in the league congregate here Wednesday to kickoff the Region 18 championships.

"We didn't play real well," said Ricks' Coach Lori Woodland of her squad's intensity.

She added, however, the Vikings had a couple of spurts that pleased her.

The Vikings built the lead on the out-of-shooting of Melinda Gee and kept it when Woodbury started dominating the middle. Still, the Eagles hung within seven points in the first half.

"I was pleased with the way the girls battled tonight," said Coach Ben Street. "Against a team with all the weapons Ricks has, our only hope was having a red-hot shooting night. But that didn't happen for us."

CSI freshman Nikki Schumacher picked up 18 points inside while Juneyee Anderson and Ita Muaveesi had 11 each.
